F.D.'S NEUTRALITY PLEA AGAIN FAILS

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 15—Barring a major change in sentiment, prospects of neutrality legislation at this session of Congress today appeared dead.

Tired Senate and House leaders turned their efforts to action on a few important measures, headed by the President's lending program, and quick adjournment.

The subject of neutrality will bob up again, probably through the efforts of Senator King (D.) of Utah, an opponent of the administration, and Senator Pepper (D.) of Florida, one of the President's staunchest supporters. But leaders in both Democratic and Republican quarters were convinced a drive for neutrality action would be futile, and individual moves seemed destined to fail.

HINT CRISIS SESSION

Messages from President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, reiterating the executive branch's stand for changes in law to permit sale of American arms to warring foreign countries were greeted generally as a restatement of position rather than insistence that the Congress remain here and act. Many of those who recently voted to postpone neutrality action until the next session were prepared to come back in special session if a new crisis in Europe demanded neutrality action. But now they want to go home.

This attitude marked the end of a long fight by the President to get Congress to carry out his foreign policy program and write a neutrality law which State department chiefs privately admit was drafted to bring pressure to bear against European dictator nations.

Mr. Roosevelt lost, but some members of his party said privately they believed it all for the best. They pointed to a powerful opposition pledged to filibuster any neutrality bill carrying out the President's ideas, and explained the debate would have given an opportunity for the President's foes to hammer at him.

FEAR WAR IN EUROPE

The President and Secretary Hull in their messages to Congress insisted that action lifting the arms embargo would provide this country with the best guarantee for world peace. With this on the statute books, they insisted, aggressors would hesitate to attack European countries who could count on the United States as a source of war material as long as they had money to buy.

But, as a Democratic senator said, the President "didn't ask us to sit by here and pass the bill," and it was taken for granted that the messages were an Administration "last word" showing the President's position. Some senators, among them Chairman Pittman of the Foreign Relations Committee, feared a war crisis in Europe next month and said they expected the President to call Congress into special session for neutrality legislation action in such a case.

SENATORS HIRAM JOHNSON (RIGHT) AND WM. E. BORAH
They Lead Fight for Neutrality

Borah Scores Deal's Neutrality Views As 'Road to War'

WASHINGTON, July 15 (INS)—President Roosevelt's message to Congress appealing for passage of his neutrality proposals before adjournment, today drew praise from his supporters and sharp criticism from foes of the administration's foreign policy.

There were ripples of derisive laughter in the House, chiefly from the Republican side, during reading of the message and Secretary of State Cordell Hull's accompanying statement.

In the Senate, where seldom have members applauded or otherwise indicated their reactions during reading of a presidential message, President Roosevelt's plea was heard in stony silence.

Comments by legislators to newsmen included:

SENATOR BORAH (R.) of Idaho: "It was a very excellent statement of his (President's) viewpoint. Of course, it was a viewpoint with which we have been familiar for months.

"In the present condition of European affairs, in my opinion, the sale of arms will inevitably involve the United States in the present conflict and imperialistic war that is either openly or under going on in Europe."

SENATOR JOHNSON (R.) of California: "We want no war and wish for peace and the security of the nation. These are practically the words of the Secretary of States now, but in the selection of one group of belligerents who would be permitted to receive every particle of support we might accord them, he has announced a doctrine at variance with neutrality.'

"The President and Mr. Hull have made crystal clear they prefer England and France and their allies, those great democracies—Russia, Rumania, Poland, Turkey—in case of war, and they will grant them every aid and trust to luck they will overcome their enemies.

"We might be sympathetic with their desires, but this would not be neutrality. It would be a role of active intervention and nothing else. When Mr. Hull speaks of our duty to contribute to the preservation of peace, he, apparently, means that we shall indicate so clearly our intention to support one group of belligerents that the other group will be deterred in its designs, and think twice before precipitating a struggle with nations who are already assured of our military and economic support.

"Centainly, this is not neutrality. There is a mere gramblin,; assumption. It is the intervention or military alliance and we want none of it."

OPPOSES CHANGES

SENATOR GEORGE (D.) of Georgia, who voted in the committee to postpone neutrality legislation, said he "presumed" the presidential message would be "considered" by the committee to which it was referred in routine fashion, but said it was "too early" to predict whether any revival of the issue would follow.

Ouch!

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., July 15 (AP)—Sitting in a dentist's office, Maurice Corn kept an eye on his automobile parked nearby.

"Open wide," said the dentist. Corn leaned back in the chair and opened his mouth.

When he looked out the window again, his car was gone. It was found later.

Gas-Mask Squads Dig for 27 Trapped In Coal Mine Blast

PROVIDENCE, Ky., July 15 (INS)—Four mine rescue squads worked feverishly today to reach 27 men trapped far underground and believed dead following a terrific explosion in the Duvin soft coal mine near Providence.

Nine of the 36 miners at work when the blast occurred made their way to safety.

With gas masks strapped on their heads, the 30 picked mine rescue men toiled in relays to reach the miners, entombed nearly two and one-half miles from the mine entrance and 181 feet below the surface.

As the hours passed without any word from the missing men the fear grew that all had perished either outright or from carbon monoxide gas which spread following the explosion.

BULLETIN

PROVIDENCE, Ky., July 15 (INS)—Bodies of 14 of the 27 miners trapped deep underground by an explosion in the Duvin soft coal mine were brought to the surface today by rescue crews who declared that all had perished.

VICTIMS PHONES WORD

First word of the explosion which sealed the tunnel closing off escape of the 27 men was shouted over the mine's telephone system to the main office by one of the trapped men. Electric current and the telephone went dead a few seconds later.

An appeal was broadcast for all available rescue crews. State Mine Inspector John Daniels arrived from Lexington and took charge of the rescue operations. A truck of rescue equipment was rushed here from Vincennes, Ind., by Charles O. Herbert, U. S. Bureau of Mines engineer.

AMBULANCES WAIT

Eleven ambulances and 30 physicians and nurses were waiting at the head of the mine shaft for the rescue men to reach the entombed miners. More than 3000 persons, many of them wives, children and relatives of the trapped men, silently and anxiously waited for news from below ground.

State highway patrolmen had blocked off the road leading from the main highway to the mine, permitting only those with urgent business to leave or enter the area.

Blind, Screen Star's Mother Tries to Die

HOLLYWOOD, July 15 (AP)—Mrs. Beth Alexander, 52-year-old mother of screen actor-radio commentator Ben Alexander, was in a critical condition today after what police described as a suicide attempt.

Detective Lieutenant Jack Stevens said the woman, leaving two notes indicating she felt she was becoming a burden, shot herself in the chest and slashed her wrists with a razor.

Mrs. Beth Alexander

Alexander, a former favorite screen juvenile, said his mother temporarily lost her sight several weeks ago and had submitted to an operation. He added she feared her sight was permanently gone, but said:

"Doctors assured he, however, that her sight would be completely restored."

British, Japs Open Parley

TOKYO, July 15 (AP)—The conference to negotiate the British-Japanese dispute at the north China Port of Tientsin opened here today against a background of anti-British sentiment fanned by patriotic societies.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and the British ambassador, Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, conferred alone for three hours in a first meeting in which, a foreign office statement said, they discussed "general questions forming the background of the situation which has arisen at Tientsin."

They will meet again Monday.

Girls Prey at Governors' Parley, Says Dickinson

LANSING, Mich., July 15 (INS)—Painting a lurid picture of extra-social activities at the recent governors' conference in the east, Governor Luren D. Dickinson today declared young girls at these functions were made "the prey of social brutes."

The 80-year-old crusading chief executive, head of Michigan's Anti-Saloon League, warned mothers not to allow their daughters to attend social functions "where liquors frequent and high life imitations are effected with utmost protection."

Accompanying the governor to the conference were his 19-year-old secretary, Margaret Shaw, and his granddaughter by adoption, Miss Della Patterson.

Fervently, Gov. Dickinson said:

"Thank God our girls came home unsullied and never will fully know how near the brink they were."

"JUST AN INCIDENT"

Governor Dickinson's statement, issued to "warn mothers and daughters of the dangerous proximity of a hellish brink for unprotected girls," added:

"What I am saying will probably elicit sneers, jibes and be termed puritanical. Divorce doesn't mean much to this class, and a ruined girl is just another passing incident."

Governor Dickinson described the social-side of the governors' conference trip as a "glowing, dreamy eddying throughout the four days in the highest brackets of social contact," participation in which "elicited extravagant expressions."

WITH MARRIED MAN

He added: "The thrill, fascination ecstasy will be lived over and over until time fades it away. I would not detract from this youthful picture, but there is another setting to which these young minds are utterly oblivious. This is the setting that makes these young girls at such functions the prey of social brutes . . .

"Small as may outwardly seem to be the danger to young girls in these and similar functions, I am saying from definite observation, personal experience and confidential statements made to

FR. DIVINE ACCEPTS R. I. OFFER

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—A statement purportedly "signed and sealed" by Angela C. Kaufman was issued from Harlem today saying that Father Major J. Divine, Negro Evangelist, had agreed to accept her mansion in Newport, R. I., and "clean up" the fashionable resort.

"Father Divine and his followers have agreed to take the offer of the place," the statement said, "to be held in escrow until any little disturbances have been obviated and until the said Angela C. Kaufman has been given an oportunity to arrange her affairs at large, peacefully with good will to all men!"

There was no indication of what the "little disturbances" were, but it was disclosed recently that Mrs. Kaufman's right to turn the house over to Divine and his "angels" had been challenged in a Supreme Court suit.

The suit was brought by Countess Dorothy Child Filipponi, fourth wife of the late Richard Washburn Child, author and diplomat, who formerly owned the property. Countess Filipponi contends she was to have had a half share in profits from the place after it was converted into a hotel. Mrs. Kaufman abandoned the hotel idea and offered the house to Divine when Newport authorities refused to give her a liquor license.

Judge Causes Big Laugh at Bridges Hearing

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15 (AP)—The first week of the deportation trial of Harry Bridges ended in a roar of laughter as defense counsel asked a handwriting sample from the man who charged Bridges was a national official of the Communist party.

"What shall he write, Your Honor?" asked Thomas B. Shoemaker, chief government counsel.

The presiding officer glanced at the witness, ex-Communist John L. Leech, and suggested:

"Just write, 'Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party.'"

RINGS DEATH ALARM TO JOIN GIRL BRIDE

Only a year ago they were a happy, laughing young couple—today both lay dead.

As young Gerald Blair, 25, of St. Francis de Sales street, Roxbury, slumped to the sidewalk at Cabot and Linden Park streets, Roxbury, today, his hand still clutching a police alarm box, death quickly snuffed out what was left of the young Blairs.

There hasn't been much for Gerald since that night last August when his pretty young wife, Hazel, fell mortally wounded from a stray bullet in a shooting gallery on Dudley street, Roxbury.

Gerald and friends rushed his 22-year-old bride to City Hospital, and physicians said they would do their best. But death stepped in within 48 hours.

Gerald knew it was an accident and forgave the careless rifleman.

But the fates that dictated Hazel's death just as married life was expanding brightly, were not content.

Unemployment, financial worries and darkening horizons enmeshed Gerald, and only the nightmare of Hazel's death was there to stand by him.

Today a police ambulance responded to the alarm box at Cabot and Linden Park streets. Physicians at City Hospital said it was carbolic acid and they'd do the best they could.

But two hours later came death—a little swifter and just as relentless.

SHE SPANS WORLD IN 16 DAYS

NEWARK, N. J., July 15—A modern Nellie Bly, Mrs. Grace Adams of New York city arrived at Newark airport today to set a new record for a round-the-world trip on commercial airlines.

She stepped from a cross-country United Air Lines plane at 10:16 a. m. (E. D. T.), 16 days, 19 hours and four minutes after leaving Port Washington, L. I., on the first passenger flight of Pan-American Airways transatlantic clippers.

The old record, 18 days, 14 hours and 36 minutes, was held by H. R. Ekins, New York newspaper reporter, who circled the globe in 1936.

Mrs. Adams, a widow of suburban Maspeth, started her record-breaking trip June 28 on the Dixie Clipper.

From Marseilles, where the Dixie Clipper deposited her, she passed through Leipzig, Athens, Basra, Jodhpur, Rangoon, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Manila and Honolulu.

Among her first flights, the widow traveled in the Graf Zeppelin in 1928 and the Hindenburg in 1936, the Doornier Do X, from Rio De Janeiro to New York in 1931, and the China Clipper in 1936.

2 Youths Face Girl's Charges

METHUEN, July 15—Captured by detectives after a 17-year-old girl sobbed out a story of being held prisoner and attacked several times, two Lawrence youths were lodged in police cells today to await grand jury action.

Miss Helen Bleicher of Arthur street told police two youths lured her into an automobile in which they were riding and drove to Salisbury Beach.

Arrested by Methuen police, Gerald Thibodeau, 20, of Oxford street, and Charles LeClaire, 20, of Atkinson street, both of Lawrence, were arraigned before Judge Albion G. Pierce and ordered held for the Essex County grand jury. The attack occurred the night of July 5.

NAVY DIVERS AGAIN GO DOWN TO SQUALUS

Draft New Plans to Lift Sub With Cargo of Dead

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 15—The navy will raise and salvage the Squalus with its own equipment and its own men.

Rumors that the job of lifting the wrecked submersible and reclaiming the bodies of the 26 sailors entombed in her might be delegated to private contractors were spiked today by officials at Portsmouth Navy Yard.

Lieutenant Commander John Longstaff made an especially vigorous denial. He said:

"There will be a change in the plans, but I don't know what they will be.

"Given calm weather today, divers will go down and ascertain the condition of the Squalus."

Everybody but the men in actual charge of salvage was in a mood of depression today, following the debacle of two days ago, when the Squalus was lifted to the surface for a few brief moments, then sank again.

The sailors took the temporary setback as part of a difficult job, and got ready to try again.

Officials stated today that at least 25 dives would have to be made for a full study of the new situation. More than 150 dives were made during the first salvage effort.

Only one of the seven pontoons used was undamaged. One was very badly damaged and three were, according to the navy, "unaccounted for." They were below with the Squalus, but whether still hooked on, smashed beneath the vessel or washed away, none could say.

In the new plan to raise the sub, the navy's new famous "miracle bell," in which 33 survivors ascended to safety, may be pressed into service.

Under the plan, the bell would be used to enable divers to enter the Squalus and set various valves to permit blowing out of water-filled compartments so that the craft might be filled with air and raised to the surface through the lifting power of her own buoyancy.

MUST SEAL LEAK

In order to carry out such a plan, naval experts pointed out, it would be necessary for the divers first to locate the trouble spot in the main high induction valve whose failure to operate is believed to have caused the disaster.

The "leak" which permitted water to rush into the sub's interior as it made its last fatal dive on May 23 would have to be "sealed" by the divers before any plan to float the sub could be undertaken, it was pointed out.

With the fatal "leak" blocked and other valves properly set, it was believed possible the Squalus could be filled with air and floated to the surface.

TERRIFIC PRESSURE

Before divers could enter the flooded compartment, where the bodies of the sub's 26 hero dead are entombed, it would be necessary to force out some of the water. Then working under terrific pressure, it would be the divers' job to "seal" the faulty induction valve and "set" various other valves.

U.S. Women Slapped by Jap Sentry

SHANGHAI, July 15 (AP)—United States and British consular authorities heard today that a Japanese sentry at Wuhu slapped two American women missionaries, an American boy and a Canadian woman missionary.

The incident occurred at Wuhu July 3, the missionaries reported.

Those involved, the report said, were Mrs. Walter Haskell of West Plains, Mo., of the United Christian Missionary Society; Mrs. Haskell's 14-year-old son, Winston; Miss Anna Stocks, Bristol, Conn., an Advent Christian Mission worker, and Miss Bertha Cassidy, a Canadian born in China and attached to the Advent Christian Missions Wuhu school.

The missionaries said they were walking along a street in Wuhu, Yangtze river port 80 miles above Nanking, and passed a Japanese sentry, who did not notice them.

Then they heard the Japanese "bellow unintelligibly." They halted and turned around, offering for his inspection their credentials. Nevertheless, they asserted, the sentry slapped each so hard that the imprint of his hand remained for several hours.

NAZIS OFFER WAY TO DANZIG PEACE

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, July 15 (INS)—Secret, unofficial, yet important soundings are being made through a number of diplomatic channels in an attempt to bring about a "peaceful" solution of the Danzig problem, it was learned today.

A number of proposals have reached the British and French governments from sources weighty enough to be given consideration by departmental experts. One important proposal, believed to be German inspired and agreeable to Danzig Nazis, has been reported to the foreign office by the British embassy in Warsaw.

This proposal suggests:

A motor road to be constructed across the Polish corridor, the construction to be financed by Germany and Poland.

"Germans" to have complete municipal control of Danzig. (Nazis have complete control now.)

But Germans of Danzig, whilst retaining citizenship rights of the Free City, to have the right of Reich German nationality to be conferred upon them by the German Reich and agreed to by Poland.

Poland to have free access to the sea through Danzig

Danzig is to remain a free city, occupied by Reich nationals with international rights granted to Poland.

Danzig to be demilitarized and this demilitarization and the peace of Danzig to be guaranteed jointly by Germany and Poland.

The police of Danzig are to be Danzig Germans.

There is to be no changed status of territory—Danzig to be neither Polish nor German territory.

BRITAIN'S DRAFTEES IN CAMP

LONDON, July 15 (AP)—Handled as carefully as boys making their first trip to summer camps, 34,000 militiamen, first peacetime conscripts in Britain's modern history, reported for service today.

Some came to camps in limousines, more on bicycles and in third-class railway carriages. Whole families drove up to camps to kiss the new soldiers good-bye.

This was approved by the authorities. Everyone, from austere general officers to case-hardened sergeant-majors, had been warned to be considerate of the new citizen army.

Special orders regarding reception of new recruits specified "no rudeness, bullying or sarcasm."

Queen Mary, War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha and other distinguished persons visited some of the detachments. The Queen mother inspected the first arrivals at Shorncliffe.

Today's conscripts will be given six months' training. Other groups will be called up at intervals until in about a year all of the first class of more than 200,000 youths between 20 and 21 will have learned to shoulder arms.

Muster of the conscript army fits in which the government's plan to have the air force, the fleet and the army at the peak of power during August and September.

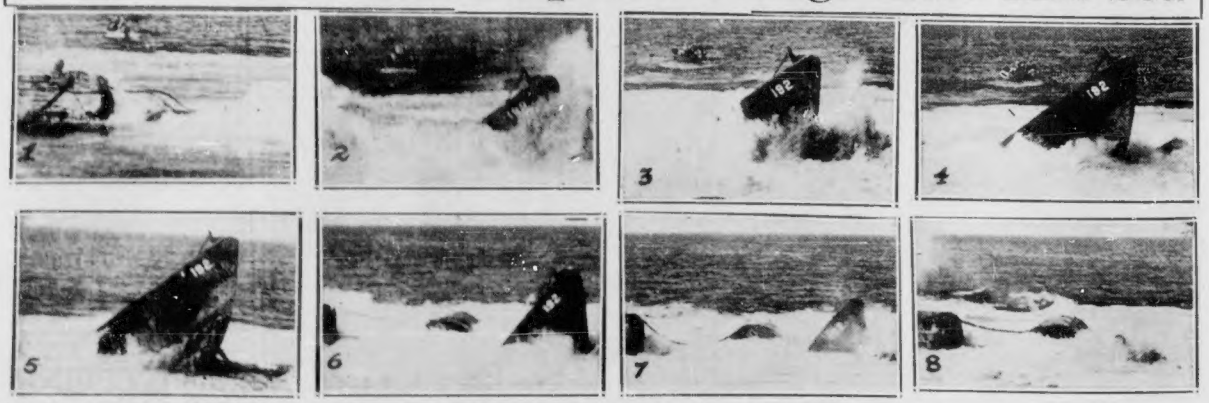

Conscientious objectors, who number only 1.7 per cent of those registered, will get medical corps, labor or similar non-combatant duty.

Draft Society Girls for War, Paper's Plea

LONDON, July 15 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express suggested today that conscription be extended to women—especially in London's fashionable West End.

"They could serve their country in the home, in the kitchen, in the hospital and on the farm," the paper said. "Conscription of women is needed especially in the West End. Idle, useless young girls of so-called 'society' eat too much, drink too much and sleep too much."

MRS. FRANCIS TAYLOR
Bridesmaid

The wedding, considered top-flight in this summer colony of the ultra ultra, will be performed at St. Augustine's church by the Rev. Joseph P. Coleman, by special dispensation of Bishop Francis P. Keough of the Providence Diocese.

A mere handful of socialites, dignitaries and celebrities will be admitted to the nuptials, but a lavish reception has been arranged at the Frazer summer home.

Miss Frazer, midwestern glamour girl and daughter of a millionaire motor magnate, made her presentation four years ago this August in the lavish "silver and white ball."

The Hon. Michael Strutt is the son of Lord Belper and brother-in-law of the Duke of Norfolk, first ranking noble of Great Britain.

Utter simplicity will mark the rites, climaxing a year of speculation, rumors, and reversals of arrangements which have kept social circles from Buckingham Palace to Gotham penthouses in a dither.

High among the list of invited guests will be the names of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and his bride, the former Mary Lee Epping Hartford. Mrs. Fairbanks will be a bridesmaid, as will be Miss Virginia French of Dedham and her sister, Mrs. John Jacob Astor 3d, the former "Tucky" French.

'Mars' Flier Will Pay for Plane

CAMDEN, N. J., July 15 (AP)—Chestor L. Eshelman, 22-year-old youth whose unannounced airplane flight "to Mars" landed him into the Atlantic Ocean and later the Camden county jail, looked for a job today to help pay for the plane he is accused of stealing.

Chester Eshelman

Judge Clifford A Baldwin released the Carlisle, Pa., flier from jail and continued his hearing indefinitely yesterday when the youth promised to repay the private flying company for the loss of the $2600 plane. His father, S. C. Eshelman, also guaranteed payment.

Eshelman, with only eight hours solo flying experience and licensed to fly only restricted areas, took off from Camden airport early in the night of June 5.

A search by police of eight states and the Civil Aeronautics Authority ended when he crashed into the sea 250 miles off Cape Cod and was picked up by a fishing trawler.

To questions of CAA officials and police, who believed he was attempting a flight to Europe, Eshelman insisted.

"My destination was Mars."

B. C. TRACK STAR HERO AT FIRE

FRAMINGHAM, July 15—Before a horrified crowd of spectators, Edward Slade, Boston College junior and track star, today dashed into a flaming rooming house and dragged Wilfred Baetz, 42, of Providence, R. I., to safety, effecting a thrilling rescue.

Baetz, a leading member of the Village Hall Players, currently presenting the play "Candlelight" here, was unconscious when Slade carried him from the building.

Five other guests had fled the fire soon after it broke out. In the confusion, Baetz was not missed at first.

Overcome by smoke, and seared by flames, Baetz was taken to Framingham Union Hospital. His condition was reported satisfactory by hospital physicians.

Slade, who is employed at a nearby estate off the Worcester Turnpike, during the summer months, was among the first at the scene. He immediately entered the blazing structure when it was learned that Baetz was missing.

The victim was lying on the floor of his room, near the hallway door, Slade said. Blood was pouring from Baetz' nose and mouth as Slade emerged with him in his arms.

Two alarms were sounded for the fire, which swept the 15-room inn from the first floor to roof. Traffic was held up in both directions on the Turnpike while firemen battled the flames.

Others driven out included Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Soulier of Rutland, Vt., Mrs. Milton Johnson of New York, Miss Emma Germaine of New York, and Sam Rudbach of Commonwealth avenue, Boston.

Fannie Brice Asks $750,000 Over Film

CHICAGO, July 15 (INS)—Fannie Brice, musical comedy, screen and radio commedienne, has sued 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., as well as Tyrone Power, Al Jolson, Alice Faye and other film actors for $750,000 over the picture, "Rose of Washington Square."

Miss Brice in her suit, filed in Superior Court, charged the film really tells her own life story and that it infringes on her right to privacy. Power, Jolson and Miss Faye appear in the movie.

Tyrone Power

The suit also asks an injunction to prevent the picture from being distributed and shown.

An identical suit, filed recently in California by Jules Arnstein, former husband of Miss Brice, was settled out of court for $25,000, according to the actress' attorney, Leo Spitz.

Eight theater companies and officials of the producing corporation also were named in the suit, which charged defamation of character and use of Miss Brice's life story without permission as well as the privacy count.

She related that her former husband, Arnstein, was arrested for complicity in the sale of stolen securities and pointed out that Clinton, hero of the film, played by Power, was similarly arrested, convicted and imprisoned.

She added that Arnstein avoided arrest by fleeing New York and hiding until his wife arranged his bond and charged that this episode is but slightly varied in the film.

PROBE 3 DEATHS IN BLAZE, BLAST AT BURLINGTON, VT.

BURLINGTON, Vt., July 15—State and city officials today started an investigation to determine the cause of the Lake Champlain Club fire, during which two men and a nine-year-old girl were killed by a hot water tank explosion.

INNOCENT AGE still enjoyed by little Frances Wanite Eley as Virginia mother moves to renew custody fight against girl's beloved aunt, Ellen V. Eley with whom she is shown above.

Investigators first attempted to discover what made the fire flare so intensely that a water tank was catapulted clean through the side of the burning building, beheading the three persons.

T. Russell Brown, 51, club manager, and Edward H. Thornton, 6, of Burlington, were standing 15 feet from the fire when the copper tank shot through the air and decapitated them. The boiler then smashed through a garage, killing Suzanne Kelley.

Like a huge cannon ball, the mass of metal hurtled on, roaring along the golf course fairway for at least 200 yards before plowing into the ground, almost out of site in sod.

Brown and Thornton, with other golfers, were watching the fire at the time of the explosion. The blaze started in a small shed attached to one corner of the clubhouse building.

The blast blew the shed to pieces and ripped off part of the main building. James Harney of Hartford, Conn., a club employe, was slightly hurt by the explosion.

With the Kelley girl when she was killed were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Justin Kelley of Burlington. Thornton was assistant treasurer of the Chittenden County Trust Company of Burlington.

R. I. Legislators Quit After 96 Minutes

PROVIDENCE, July 15 (AP)—Rhode Island legislators went back home today after a 96-minute special session at which defects in the state unemployment relief and emergency public works acts were repaired so as to permit continued relief borrowing by cities and towns.

Through an oversight, the regular session of the Legislature permitted the emergency periods under the laws to expire June 30 and borrowing therefore was blocked. Governor William H. Vanderbilt quickly signed the special session measures.

Mother of 8 Gets U. S. Stay

WASHINGTON, July 15 (INS)—A stay in the deportation proceedings against Mrs. Madeline Bucholz, Los Angeles mother of eight children was ordered by the U. S. immigration authorities today after Rep. Kramer (D) of California introduced a bill in the House to permit her to become a citizen.

Mrs. Bucholz, a Canadian, married an American and came to this country on a temporary permit, which she overstayed. Her children, however, are American citizens.

The plight of the family, threatened with separation by the deportation proceedings, was brought to the attention of Secretary of Labor Perkins by Kramer and she issued the stay order.

Rush Injured Hub Seaman to Halifax

HALIFAX, July 15—The Coast Guard Cutter Champlain was steaming here today with Robert Yeatman of Princeton street, East Boston, a seaman who suffered serious injuries while working aboard the trawler Billow. Radio reports said one of Yeatman's legs was mangled and the other fractured while the Billow was off Sable Island.

CALLAHAN TO REFUTE COST LIST

State Public Works Commissioner William F. Callahan today worked on reports and statistics which he claims will refute charges of Deputy Comptroller Ralph Houghton that hurricane reconstruction costs on Mohawk Trail work were exorbitant.

When Governor Saltonstall's ouster hearing against the commissioner reopens Monday, Houghton's "elaborate mathematical calculations" will be proved valueless, Callahan promised.

Houghton declared in yesterday's session that three contracts awarded by the commissioner for work on the Mohawk Trail and Jacob's Ladder called for payments $299,517 in excess of unit prices which had been established by Callahan.

The commissioner asserted he had established certain minimum prices for hurricane repairs and debris removal, but "that because of the extreme emergency he frequently had to "dicker" with contractors. He praised the state engineers for opening the western highways in time for tourist travel.

"Mr. Houghton is a fine mathematician, but he has no practical knowledge of construction work, as he has already admitted at this hearing," Callahan said.

"He does not seem to realize that the Mohawk Trail and Jacobs Ladder projects were opened in record-breaking time under the worst winter conditions. His comparisons are neither fair nor reasonable."

Rings Death Alarm To Join Girl Bride

For the second time within a week, a two-alarm fire which police believed was set today threatened the congested tenement section of Chelsea where the great conflagration of 1908 raged.

Today's blaze broke out in a three-story frame and metal building of the Rubenstein-Kopak Company, mattress manufacturers, which was swept by fire on January 7.

Because of the January fire, only the charred shell of the building could burn, but the place was in flames when apparatus arrived. Dense smoke billowed over wooden tenement buildings along Second street and more than 50 persons in neighboring structures fled to the street.

On Wednesday morning, a two-alarm fire of suspicious origin swept the New England Wrecking Company on Third street, a block away.

Fire Chief Charles Yoke said several persons reported seeing a man enter the wrecking firm's plant, then run from the scene just as the fire started.

As today's fire was being fought, Chief Yoke said an intensive investigation will be made. Chelsea police prepared to take added precautions against the threats of firebugs.

Firemen, wearing smoke masks, were endangered by falling timbers while battling the flames. Chief Yoke ordered heavy water curtains established by hose crews to protect the nearby tenements.

8 Buildings Burn In Dover, N. H.

DOVER, N. H., July 15—A fire that started in the Edwin York coal yard today levelled the coal shed, spread to residences nearby, virtually destroyed seven and damaged three others.

A conservative estimate of the damage, according to firemen, is $150,000.

The coal yard was located in Locust street and stored 2800 tons when the blaze broke out. Firemen from Portsmouth and Rochester came to the assistance of the local department.

Chief of Police Andrew McDaniell and Fire Chief Knott co-operated in an investigation of the origin of the fire.

There was an explosion in a house near the trunk line of the American Woolen Company during the blaze, and for a time this added to the danger.

Sunday's Paper

Mrs. Roosevelt on Teaching Children

Joe Cronin's Inside Story

When the Titantic Went Down

How Gangsters Rule Cities

By COLLIN CLINE

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT charming wife of the President, writes a delightfully interesting, refreshingly intimate column for you tomorrow in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

As one of the world's most widely traveled women and an uncompromising defender of the rights of her sex in business, education and public affairs, she will talk to you.

Joe Cronin

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

Her initial subject will concern the problem of teaching children to do useful work without "regimentation."

Daily, in the Boston Evening American, she will continue to voice her opinions, striving at all times to make you feel as though you were her guest at a White House tea or luncheon.

WHAT IS THE STORY behind the sudden and exceedingly welcome activity in the Boston Red Sox camp? You are asking that question. So are thousands of other enthusiastic New Englanders.

That is why Joe Cronin, fighting manager of the Sox, joins the Advertiser's writing staff tomorrow and gives you the FACTS only he can give.

You will not want to miss this feature, particularly not if you are one of the many fans who are anxious to see Boston achieve its rightful place in baseball.

KATHLEEN NORRIS is another new member of the Advertiser's staff you'll greet with wide open arms.

TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS AGO! Perhaps you remember it or perhaps you do not. Regardless of age, you will surely read the Advertiser's GREEN MAGAZINE'S dramatic account of the tragic sinking of the S. S. Titanic and the heroic deaths of 1503 passengers, officers and members of the crew.

It is maritime history's immortal tale.

MAY YOHE'S OWN STORY of her dazzling life continues in the Green Magazine. You may pity this once-great actress and petted darling of society or you may condemn her. You may say she invited the disaster that flung her from the topmost pedestal of British aristocracy to the humiliation of pauperism in America's Far West.

Yet you cannot deny yourself the privilege of reading the forceful, candid autobiography she penned in the sad, last days of her broken life.

THE GREEN MAGAZINE contains many other interesting stories and articles. There is the thrilling revelation of underworld activities which exposes how gangsters run American cities by working hand in glove with politicians and shrewd, scheming lawyers.

It is a daring, INSIDE story of sinister "tough mob" rule that has undermined the modern municipality, staid old Boston not excepted.

You will also like the "Song Hit" page and the romantic ballad, "White Sails," as well as the sparkling columns of Walter Winchell, Mark Hellinger, Carol Ames and George Holland.

IF YOU WANT FUN you will be the Sunday Advertiser's guest at Revere Beach's famous Nickel Day. The complete details appear tomorrow. Don't neglect to see them. It is a rare treat for you and the children.

THE NEWS PAGES bring you all the worthwhile happenings of the city, state, nation and world.

Here, you will find an exclusive article about the plans of Jan Bata, famous Czechoslovak shoe magnate, to build a factory in New England, England.

Here, too, you will see the hitherto-unrevealed story of how Chelsea's fire officials wiped out the deadly menace of arson.

IN THE AMERICAN WEEKLY, most widely read magazine in the world, you will find "Tales of the California Gold Trail," a saga of hard men, brave women and desperate outlaws—all in a wild scramble for riches!

It recalls the drama, romance and tragedy of the gilded days when gold beckoned the adventurous, every woman was a queen, and the only law was the miners' rule of rope and gun.

Interesting features include: "Do Your Knees Need Slimming?" a scientific story no woman who wants to look well in the season's short skirts would think of omitting; the Housewife's Food Almanack and the "Strange Marital Adventures of a Hand Me-Down Husband."

Among the short articles are "Cold Homes for Fat People," "Styles from the Pantry Shelf," "Where Sneezes are Movie Stars," "Nothing New in the World of Sport," "History Repeats Itself in the Movies," and "Makes a Living by Kicking Around the Woman He Loves."

Back on Job After Plunge of 30 Feet

Falling 30 feet from an elevated runway at the yards of the City Fuel Co., Border st., East Boston, where he is employed, Frank Furcolo, 57, of Saratoga st., East Boston, escaped injury yesterday when he fell into a pile of soft coal and was back on the job today.

PROBE OF PAYROLL PADDING MAY SHAKE M. N. G. STAFF

Possibility of a drastic shake-up of the whole National Guard organization in the commonwealth loomed today in the wake of the Y. D. military court held yesterday at Commonwealth Armory.

The court sifted charges of falsification of attendance records and alleged collection of drill pay by men who didn't drill.

The investigation was confined to the 101st Infantry, Boston's most famous regiment.

Charges are that in one strange interlude, 56 men were down for drill pay, when actually only 34 reported for drill service.

Adjutant General Edgar C. Erickson will ultimately get the report of the court, which in military law plays the part of a grand jury.

COURT CAN'T CONVICT

It cannot neither absolve nor convict, as constituted, but merely recommend.

Judge Advocate Elijah Adlow and Maj.-Gen. Daniel Needham presided and Col. Paul G. Kirk, superior court judge and officer of the 101st Infantry, was the first witness called.

Col. Kirk, although testifying, remained in the room while other witnesses were called, but refused comment on whether he had remained as a "prosecuting officer."

"This is merely a routine matter," he declared.

City Councillor Robert Gardner Wilson was another who appeared before the court of inquiry, going in with Maj. Dennis Shillue of the 101st Infantry. They were before the court for more than three hours with books and records, but they, too, refused comment on the case.

MILITARY MATTER

Gen. Needham, heading the inquiry, refused to discuss the nature of the alleged payroll padding being probed. He said:

"It's a military matter and I don't want to make any formal comment."

Brig.-Gen. Francis Logan of the 52d Infantry also testified.

Fifteen officers and men were summoned in all to appear.

List 31 Forgotten Dead To Go to Potter's Field

Old age and poverty—and death!

They're the qualifications for admission to Boston's most forlorn brotherhood and sisterhood of forgotten men and women.

Bodies of this group's members lie side by side, unwanted and unclaimed, in the city's two public mortuaries.

So today, following routine procedure, Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner for the southern Suffolk district, listed the forgotten dead in his custody.

ONLY 29 IDENTIFIED

They total 31, only two unidentified.

Known, at least, are the names the other 29 used in the closing years of their unhappy lives. Assumed names, perhaps. That may be why their bodies lie unclaimed.

They probably wanted it so.

But "accommodations" at the Northern and Southern Mortuaries are limited. Needs of the dead are scant, but lifeless newcomers will require even the slabs on which earlier arrivals lie.

Hence Dr. Leary's announcement today:

"The Southern Mortuary's present 31 tenants will be transferred to unmarked graves in Potter's Field unless friends or relatives come forward to make other arrangements."

Rioting Closes WPA Jobs in Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 15 (AP)—WPA operations were shut down in strike-scarred Minneapolis today after a bloody battle between police and demonstrators last night in which one man was killed and 17 persons gassed or injured.

Blazing riot guns and clouds of tear gas sent several hundred WPA strikers and 2000 or more onlookers scurrying for cover as police threw a protective cordon about 115 women sewing project workers when they left their quarters and were followed by a menacing mob.

Shouts and screams of the pickets, the reports of guns and showers of rocks made Bedlam in the downtown district along Second street North, where the sewing quarters are located in a three-story brick building.

Riot guns barked from armored police cars and gunfire spattered down from a nearby building top, where a yelling, rock-throwing group of men stood.

In the melee, Emil A. Bergstrom, 60, of Minneapolis, standing with the demonstrators in a filling station lot across from the sewing project building, was shot in the head, dying shortly afterward.

Nine others, including a 14 year-old boy, Lynn Thompson, and a 10-year-old girl, Joan Phyllis Moskdick, were shot, none seriously; a policeman's jaw was battered and five policemen and two others were gassed.

Early this week a policeman died from a heart attack after a swirmish there with pickets.

Mayor George E. Leach, in a radio announcement, disclaimed further responsibility for protecting the workers, saying it was a federal problem.

Strike leaders, calling for a mass meeting Sunday at which David Lasser, national president of the workers' alliance, WPA union, will speak, were in turn called to a meeting later today with Governor Harold Stassen.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—The Workers' Alliance, a union of WPA and unemployed workers, announced today its members throughout the country would stop for work a full day Thursday to protest WPA cuts.

Renew Call For WPA Strike Here

Disregard for President Roosevelt's declaration that "you can't strike against the government," was shown today in Boston as efforts for a WPA strike to protest the new relief wages system was renewed.

Three persons, described by police as Communists, one an attractive young woman, were taken to municipal court by Back Bay police to face charges of distributing handbills without authority after they were arrested on Huntington avenue.

Officers said the trio passed out bills among workers of the $5,000,000 subway project, heatedly attacking the relief act.

The three were booked under the names of Adelle Halpern, 29, of Irving street, Stanley Rimmer, 30, of Bynner street, and Russell Robertson, 32, of Bond street, all of Roxbury.

In the meantime delegates from Massachusetts craft unions met today at the Hotel Westminster, to consider what course of action they shall take in the face of longer hours and periodic lay-offs.

Many WPA workers were reported waiting for the outcome of today's conference to decide whether or not they will stage a general walkout.

Enforcing the rule that all who quit will be fired after a five-day period of absence, WPA headquarters announced that 64 workers on strike in the Lowell-Lawrence area have been discharged. A similar deadline approaches for 76 more who are "absent" in the Merrimack Valley cities.

Time limit for 38 "strikers" in Boston, including hoisting engineers who operate cranes and power shovels at the subway project, and 16 absentees in Fall River expires on Monday.

Both Sides Set for Long Struggle in WPA Strike

WASHINGTON, July 15 (INS)—The WPA crisis today became a stick-it-out struggle between two forces equally determined not to give ground.

On one side, thousands of WPA workers doggedly continue protest strikes against wages and hours provisions of the new relief act. They want the prevailing rate of wage. Thousands are risking dismissal to continue work stoppages throughout the nation.

On the other side WPA, headed by Commissioner F. C. Harrington, army colonel who always has followed the never-retreat code, stands fast on its policy that workers who remain idle five or more days will be dismissed.

At the White House, the nation's Chief Executive warned the strikers they cannot strike against the federal government. His statement followed a similar comment from PITTSFIELD, July 15—Already committed to Northampton State Hospital for the Insane, Silvio Grande, 34, of North Adams, today faced charges of murdering his father, Domenic, and attempting to murder Alice Lagrande, both of North Adams.

Indictments were returned by a grand jury which heard charges Grande bludgeoned his father to death and attacked Miss Lagrande on March 29. He was subsequently committed to the Northampton Hospital pending trial of criminal charges.

LONG CASE AIDS BAN ON 'ROPE'

ROCHESTER, N. H., July 15—A move to abolish hangings in New Hampshire began to gather momentum today, with the return from Concord of Representative George A. Pray.

He was one of the 12 official witnesses of the execution of Howard Long, sex slayer, formerly of Massachusetts.

Pray is author of a bill to substitute the electric chair for hanging in capital punishment cases.

He says that virtually every official present left the death chamber a convert to the electric chair method of taking the life of a castaway.

Pray said that both Warden Clarke of the state prison and Sheriff Elliott of Belknap county agreed that they hoped never again to have to hang a man.

Meanwhile, Long was buried in Pine Grove Cemetery, Manchester, with no mourners and no clergyman.

Arrangements for the burial were made by Long's counsel, John S. Hurley, who did not attend. The burial was a brusque affair. It took barely 15 minutes.

Beard Worth $33.33 Per Foot Off the Chin!

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 15 (AP)—It's in the record today that a man's beard is worth at least $33.33 a foot.

C. C. Neely, 81-year-old farmer, charged he was set upon by three youths who whacked off a yard of his long beard. He sued for damages.

Special Judge Thomas Woodward granted a $100 judgment to the elderly man. A court attache said the damages were figured at "$33.33 per foot, as three feet were trimmed off by the boys."

Professional Pryers...

Experts pre-shop the Value Belt to make your shopping trip a triumph.

NO matter how early you get to a VALUE BELT store, there's always one shopper who gets there ahead of you,—days ahead. She's a "professional shopper," one of many paid by these modern merchants to "get tough," to make sure that everything is exactly as represented. Nothing is a buy unless she says "it's a buy." Take slips for instance. If the buyer talks about a "deep hem," the professional shopper expects it to be really deep. She insists on knowing how much rayon and how much silk . . . exactly. Handmade lace had better be genuine handmade lace. Size 16 must measure sixteen. "French seams" must have the accent in every stitch. "All sizes" must mean that there is ample stock in every size. Full assortments must include all the colors, patterns, styles and materials. Pre-shopping makes shopping the VALUE BELT a happy triumph. You come home with precisely what you set out to buy.

War Scare Fading, Publisher Asserts

By W. W. CHAPLIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 15—After a round-trip Clipper flight to Europe and conferences with leading European statesmen, M. C. Meigs, publisher of the Chicago American, left by plane for Chicago tonight firmly convinced there will be no general war this year.

"I went over there with an open mind," he said, "and that's the impression I got from talking with statesmen and people in the street. There are lots of chips on shoulders in Europe, but I don't think anyone wants to knock one off."

He had a long conversation with British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, besides to such men as Lord Lothian, who has been appointed Britis hambassador to Washington, former British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and many others.

"I was tremendously impressed by Chamberlain," he said. "He has a quiet confidence about the whole situation. My impression was that he feels his action at Munich has been fully justified.

"It is my impression that the explanation of Munich is that at that time Chamberlain didn't have a single card to play and Hitler had them all. Now the whole situation is changed and there are indications that England is twice as well prepared as she was in 1914."

Meigs said that governmental confidence had spread throughout the population and that of all the men he talked to not one failed to express a firm belief England is prepared to carry through any program it launches.

The outward evidences of preparation were everywhere visible, he said. Although he was only there a few days he saw air-raid trenches being dug in the park, volunteers drilling at night after work hours, tent encampments in the suburts, and test blackouts at night. But what impressed him most of all was Chamberlain himself, and his show of quiet strength.

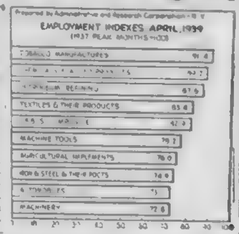

The publisher indicated he saw no immediate likelihood of co-operation of Russia with the dictatorships.

"I don't believe Russia will send troops out of the country," he said. "Russia would be happy to see war between England and the dictatorships, and when it was all over she'd pick up the pieces."

N. E. Holds Own Despite Trend

New England's relative stability in the face of recessionary trends elsewhere has often been a subject for comment here . . . Explanations of statistical records served to clarify the issue . . . And today we can complement them with most enlightening charts on employment . . .

THE WORKER . . . In a consumer goods industry is far better off than his fellow employed by a durable goods industry . . . Charted figures for the index of employment show the relative experience of the two groups . . . And as the former benefits so too do general conditions in the area where the employment exists . . . Non-durable goods industries workers are much better off than in 1932, while faring better than last year . . . Durable goods employment took a steep fall from the 1938 peak, which was just short of the 1923-25 normal of 100 . . . And while both divisions are now experiencing conditions comparable to 1934-35 there is a wide difference in the relationship in terms of recovery from the lows of this decade, well as to normal employment . . . And it is in New England that consumer good manufacture is largely located . . .

INDIVIDUAL . . . Industry figures provide further evidence of the "why" in this section's trade activity record . . . The employment indexes chart is adjusted to a normal, or 100, corresponding to the peak months of 1937 . . . Working from this different base, one keyed to results in the post panic age, we obtain the same answer . . . The fourth bar from the top is textiles and their products . . . One of the most important of consumers goods lines . . . In April the index number was 83.4 . . . Better than the Bureau of Labor composite right under it, which may be taken as representative of the country as a whole.

FOR THOSE . . . Who want to generalize on the status of all industry there is plenty of food for thought in the line representing the two divisions . . . Notice how they were entwined in 1929 . . . Then if distrust of that year militates against accepting it as proof of what prosperity employment looks like turn to 1937 . . . The latter year was the nearest approach to prosperity in 10 years . . . And durable goods workers were close to normal . . . And is well for us to remember that in order to avoid the dangers of sectional smugness . . . And to prevent a too casual discounting of arguments that confidence and capital investment play a part in its unsatisfactory showing . . .

Insurance Firms Closely Guarded

Proposed federal regulation of financial corporations, such as life insurance companies, raises not only the question of business baiting, but also the issue of a conflict between federal and state governments.

To read recent remarks of politicians th uninformed might assume that the life insurance companies were running rampant in unrestricted laissez faire. However the fact is that the insurance companies are subject to rigorous state regulations and supervision.

State insurance department examiners are at work checking up on management in each individual New York company about half the time. Experts of the state insurance department study and approve every formula for distributing cost and for dealing with policyholders.

In the insurance profession, it is generally conceded that New York state sets the standard for the whole country in insurance legislation and supervision. Accordingly, out of state companies consider it a blue ribbon to be held eligible to sell their policies in New York state. Massachusetts too stands very high among the states in this regard.

Thus, without prejudicing the case, the issue is not whether life insurance companies should be regulated. It is whether on top of existing state supervision there should be superimposed Federal regulation.

If the status quo is under fire, then it should follow that the targets of criticism are not only the executives of the companies but also state officials who have been charged with superivision.

And in looking for wrinkles in the elephant's hide, it is important not to forget the hide itself.

Long before Social Security was provided in this country, tens of millions of thrifty Americans, standing on their own legs, were buying economic security for themselves and their dependents through life insurance. Most of the corporate and real wealth in the country is owned by the people through intermediaries of a co-operative character such as life insurance companies and saving institutions.

Stock Prices Stumble Over Varied Routes

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—Stocks stumbled over an irregular route in today's market.

Dealings followed the customary Saturday let-down and were exceptionally light throughout. Moderate gains and losses were fairly evenly distributed.

Many traders again turned to holiday relaxation and shunned Wall Street. Those who appeared found little change in either the foreign scene or the domestic business picture. The latter, however, as in recent sessions, helped bolster speculative spirits.

Bonds and commodities were slightly mixed.

Among stocks, Loft again edged into new high ground for the year. Posting gains were U. S. Steel, Sears Roebuck, Eastern Airlines, Western Union, American Can, General Electric, J. C. Penney, Union Carbide and Pennsylvania.

Behind most of the time were Chrysler, General Motors, Allis Chalmers, International Harvester, Anaconda, Santa Fe, Glenn Martin and Air Reduction.

A prop for market sentiment was the Federal Reserve summary of department store sales showing an increase in the week ended July 9 of 2 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago when consumer spending was beginning to expand substantially.

Principal improvement was reported from the districts of Atlanta, St. Louis, San Francisco, Chicago, Kansas City, Dallas and Philadelphia.

A cheerful indicator also was seen in the figures of the Rubber Manufacturers' Association disclosing consumption of the crude staple by United States manufacturers in June amounted to 47,259 tons. Most trade forecasts had placed the total at around 45,000 tons.

Studied was the statement of the National Machine Tool Builders' Association showing sales in this field, regarded as an important industrial barometer, were off 37 per cent in June from the preceding month. A drop in foreign orders it was explained more than offset a gain in domestic volume.

Martin May Act

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—The possibility of important new negotiations between the securities and exchange commission and the New York Stock Exchange was raised today when William McC. Martin, exchange president, stated that "something drastic" must be done soon to preserve the usefulness of the stock market.

MIKE & IKE

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—Wall street, where business has been slack for some time, was entertained today with the tale of Mike and Ike—a little middle western railroad that has gotten a foot back on Prosperity street as result of the development of the Illinois oil fields.

Mike & Ike, as described in the tale formally carries the name of Missouri & Illinois Railroad, operates 193 miles of track in both states southeast of St. Louis and is 51 per cent owned by the mighty Missouri Pacific Railroad.

Mike & Ike, with black gold spouting in its territory, is in the black. For the first four months of this year net income was $104,698 compared with a deficit of $32,906 in the same period last year.

U. S. Pipe & Foundry

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—The United States Pipe & Foundry Co. reported today for the six months ended June 30 a net profit of $1,434,915, equal to $2.06 a share on the common stock, compared with $778,294, or $1.12 a share, in the first half of 1938.

ALTER LEND-SPEND BILL IN VOTE BID

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—President Roosevelt's $2,800,000,000 lending program may reach the Senate floor late next week somewhat changed from its present form.

With Republicans generally and some Democrats in both House and Senate promising opposition even though the plan is revised, Senator Adams (D) of Colorado, a member of the banking committee, [illegible] the measure [illegible] today:

"Some changes are inevitable. There are some things all concede ought to be rewritten."

Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader, said the 23 Republican senators would be almost solidly against the program, which administration officials contend would be self-liquidating and would stimulate business and employment.

Most of the 169 Republicans of the House also will be against it, Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, the Republican leader, said, although no survey had been made.

Representative Wolcott (R) of Michigan and Senator Taft (R.) of Ohio, banking committeemen, argued the bill delegated too much discretionary power to the executive branch. They will try to trim it in this respect.

Democratic leaders conceded there would be considerable debate but forecast approval before Congress went home.

Specifically, witnesses to date have opposed the provision for toll road loans. They argued such highways would not bring the returns hoped for and suggested among other things that the government buy strips of land along the rights of way and sell or lease it to business people.

Insurance Shows Gain

HARTFORD, Conn., July 15 (AP)—The 297 fire and marine insurance companies licensed to transact business in Connecticut reported the underwriting profit on their total business during 1938 was $71,289,074, an increase of approximately $1,000,000 over the previous year.

The annual report of the Connecticut insurance department issued today showed also net claims incurred by all licensed companies on their total countrywide business in 1938 were $339,608,724, compared with $327,849,997 in 1937. Premiums earned totaled $806,258,797 compared with $794,343,308 in 1937.

Dividends declared by the companies in 1938 amounted to $114,417,246 compared with $101,943,204 in 1937.

O. K. Rail Bill

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—The House interstate commerce committee approved today a transportation bill which would place water carriers under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Car Totals Rise

DETROIT, July 15 (AP)—Ward's automotive reports said today that production for the current week was estimated at 61,610 cars and trucks, an increase from last week's holiday reduced total of 42,782. The industry produced 44,510 units this week a year ago.

Charges Girls Prey At Governor Parley

me by those interested as I was that any mother who permits her girl to attend such functions should demand iron-clad protection."

Describing the dinner at Saratoga, Dickinson told how a "charming little girl" was "by high life rules paired at a table with a young man with wife and children at their far away home."

SHE MADE A DATE

He related: "All aglow in her innocent youthful glee she unfolded plans made to pair with him at each following public function with an added trip during the lull at New York to visit a friend of his, to take her through the highways, byways, hellish beckonings at every turn, through similar routes from which thousands like her never return.

"Cases with similar settings are all too near home.

"Not 400 feet from where I am dictating occurred one. It resulted in the tragic death of a most lovable and favorite legislative employe."

He did not identify this reference.

Dickinson, who still teaches a Sunday school class at a rural church near his home, said his statement was intended as a warning to mothers and daughters, adding:

"There is more danger than in the old saloon days."

In his formal statement, the Governor said:

"I have been requested to depict certain features of the social side of the late Governors' conference trip. Saratoga, with her historical background, Albany with her two days' council program, imposing capitol, country club, state dinners, gorgeous banquet, a day down the river, dining with the President, and a stop at West Point.

"With teh last day given over to sightseeing and entertainment at the World's Fair, closing with a banquet of dazzling brilliancy at the Waldorf-Astoria made up the numbers.

"When and where in the country could one duplicate such a set up? Participation elicited extravagant expressions.

"Young people, especially girls, of which there were many, made ineffectual efforts to describe the glowing, dreamy eddying through the four days in the highest brackets of social contact.

"I would not detract from this youthful picture. But there is another setting to which these young minds are utterly oblivious. This is the setting that makes these young girls at such functions the prey of social brutes.

'LEECHES SWARM IN'

"In this gathering in the main were high-class citizens, but none can eliminate or keep out all the leeches when swarms from outside were trying to climb in. 'Tis so at all high life functions. We cannot expect Albany and New York to be exceptions.

"Girls from 15 to 25 were there. We had two in our party. Never would I have permitted either to have gone without constant watch. I know what they are going to face.

"What a responsibility! What aches of mind! But I hadn't measured fully the new liberties under repeal. Fascinations, brilliance, high life systems and customs, bewildering scenery and surroundings, paired with or alone with strangers at glowing functions with unlimited flow of every variety of liquors at every turn, with dance halls, drinking tables on the side; richly-dressed and sweet voiced hosts and uniformed waiters repeatedly urging visitors of every age, including these girls, to drink."

Saltonstall at Parley; Aide "Saw Nothing"

Governor Saltonstall, motoring through the White Mountains over the week-end, was unavailable for comment on the Governor Dickinson statement relative to the conference of governors at Albany.

The Bay State governor was among the state chief executives who attended the affair.

Governor Saltonstall, however, was not accompanied by any members of his family on the Albany trip. His only aide was Russell Gerould, attached to the governor's secretarial staff. Gerould said he saw nothing unusual at the conference.

Garner Pays Bet on Congress Adjourning

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—Vice President Garner paid off today on a bet that Congress would adjourn by this date. He instructed his aides to see that a sealed envelope, bearing the names of Secretary of War Woodring and Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, be delivered to Woodring's office. The content of the envelope was not disclosed.

Garner has other bets, however, in which he fixed later dates, which he still hopes to win.

Hollywood Paragraphs

HOLLYWOOD, July 13—Charlie Bickford follows Spencer Tracy and Pat O'Brien in the guise of a screen priest when he steps into "Murder In The Big House," based on the Colorado State Prison break in 1929.

At that time Father Patrick O'Neil helped stop the rioting at the risk of his life and was subsequently awarded the Carnegie Medal for Bravery.

This story, which Monogram will produce, is Father O'Neil's own account of the break. He will be on hand to help supervise much in the same way Father Flanagan did on "Boystown." Barton MacLane gets a top spot in the cast, with William Nigh directing.

Whether Claudette Colbert or Henry Fonda like to turn out camp lights by 11 p. m. or not John Ford is playing a strict disciplinarian at the "Drums Along the Mohawk" location camp in Utah. With 300 people in "Camp Drums," Ford has to have some semblance of law and order or they'd never get the picture finished on schedule.

Rules are plenty stringent and, just to make sure everyone adheres to them, Jack has appointed a governing committee of a half-dozen brawny gents to police the camp. Fines are imposed on the lawbreakers and the same rules go for the big stars on the jaunt as the extras.

Just a few minutes before George Raft took the train for New York he met with Jack Warner and Hal Wallis and signed an exclusive waver ticket. George will do no more Universal or other outside movies unless he is loaned. Apparently he gets along better with the W. B. clan than he did at Para.

While in New York he will make a personal appearance with "Each Dawn I Die."

THE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE of the United States Senate has courageously and wisely voted to suspend consideration of ANTI-NEUTRALITY proposals during the remainder of the present session of Congress.

This action means that the existing neutrality laws of the United States remain in force, including the present embargo on shipment of munitions and implements of war to belligerent nations.

Thus Congress takes a helpful step towards keeping America out of war. Beyond any doubt, if the people of the United States had an opportunity to vote on the issue of keeping out of war, a vast majority would have voted exactly as a majority of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has done.

Therefore, the Senate vote was a truly representative and a truly democratic and a truly AMERICAN vote.

It has been said that the United States can keep out of war if it has the will to do so. Its people HAVE that will. The Senate has RESPECTED it.

Now the country itself can go about—and we hope will go about—MINDING ITS OWN AMERICAN BUSINESS.

Today, under the law prohibiting the exportation of arms, munitions and "implements of war" to ALL belligerent nations, we are NEUTRAL IN ACT AND IN SPIRIT.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in a press conference warned of "possible dire consequences if Congress adjourned without action on a neutrality policy for the nation to meet eventualities abroad."

What "dire consequences?"

Can "dire consequences" result from this nation's remaining neutral and minding its own business?

Seeing that either the Bloom or Pittman Bill would make us an UNNEUTRAL nation participating in alien wars, it would seem that then and only then would "DIRE CONSEQUENCES" fall on the American people.

And what are these "eventualities abroad" that President Roosevelt believes we MUST meet in case of war?

In case of an outbreak of war abroad our first duty would be to close our own doors, front and back, get our defenses ready for possible invasion and then ATTEND TO OUR OWN AFFAIRS.

Under the Bloom or Pittman measure the President would become a "WAR DICTATOR."

What of the "dire consequences" inherent in this?

Those measures give him the right to proclaim a state of war abroad and name the belligerents.

A biased President, such as President Roosevelt has plainly shown himself to be, would first decide to his own satisfaction which are "the aggressor nations" and then outlaw those nations and then place an embargo on those nations.

And then offensive acts would undoubtedly invite and precipitate a war with nations with which the people of the United States have no quarrel.

Such a war would mean immediately the suspension of our CONSTITUTIONAL liberties, concentration camps at home and the death abroad of vast numbers of our young men.

President Roosevelt speaks about Congress acting on a "neutrality policy for the nation." Congress fortunately HAS ACTED on a just and wise and effective neutrality policy for the nation.

That action resulted in the present one hundred per cent Neutrality Act which is now in force.

CONGRESS ACTED AGAIN on Tuesday when the powerful Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate said in effect:

"That law stands, and this country REMAINS NEUTRAL."

The thirty-four Senators who refused to approve the Bloom or Pittman anti-Neutrality Bill were fully alive to the "dire consequences" threatening the peace and safety of the United States in President Roosevelt's foreign war program.

They were also fully alive to the dangers to democracy in making the President a war dictator. They said:

"WE ARE UNALTERABLY OPPOSED TO THE REPEAL OR MODIFICATION OF THE PRESENT NEUTRALITY LAW PROHIBITING THE SALE OR EXPORTATION OF ARMS, MUNITIONS OR IMPLEMENTS OF WAR TO NATIONS ENGAGED IN WAR.

"WE ARE AGAINST ANY DISCRETION BEING LODGED IN THE HANDS OF ANY CHIEF EXECUTIVE TO DETERMINE AN AGGRESSOR OR AGGRESSORS DURING ANY WAR ABROAD.

"WE BELIEVE IN THE REAL NEUTRALITY OF OUR NATION IN CASE OF ANY ARMED CONFLICT."

Congress should adjourn—leaving the country breathing easier by killing ALL the Administration's proposed ANTI-neutrality legislation and avoiding ALL the "dire consequences" to our peaceful people involved in the dangerous and despotic Presidential program.

Human Side of News -:- by EDWIN C. HILL

IN THE WORLD WAR American newspapers made the other newspapers of the world take their dust by sending over crews of good "legmen" who were trained to find out what happened and why, and to step right into the thick of things to get this information.

As the war progressed, censorship closed in on these bucko lads, former police reporters quite a few of them, and the smoke-screen of diplomatic double-talk began to obscure the news.

But our newspapers did a grand job of serving their readers, before they were roped and hog-tied, and there is no jingoism in recalling that American reporters had the European lads blinking with amazement with their fast double-plays in getting the news and relaying it to their papers.

A FREE PRESS can live only in a free country and in times of peace, and just now, throughout the world, it has to fight for every line of honest spot news it turns in to its readers.

This preliminary tangle of Japan and Russia, on the border of outer Mongolia gives a good action picture of reporters working in a fog. Each side keeps on topping the other in fancy communiques as first Japan and then Russia tells the world how it dropped the pasteboard planes of the enemy.

Deep in the heart of Asia two great tides of history are meeting and no factual observer can get at it to tell us the truth.

BEHIND THE BATTLE LINES IN FAR EAST

Free Press Defies Danger to Give World True Story

It is as if Louis and Galento had fought alone in a locked room and each had emerged to tell all and sundry how he had dumped the other—and the boosegow for anybody who tried to check up on them.

MONGOLIA, in every important sense, a puppet state of Russia, just as the challenger, Manchuria, is a puppet state of Japan. The world has a quite elaborate ignorance of both of them.

Dr. Leonard Ludwin, Austrian-born flyer and explorer, now living in New York, is perhaps the only Occidental who has had a ringside seat at the build-up of the Mongolian army and Russia's diligent efforts to build a buffer state against Japan.

Dr. Ludwin tells me he was amazed to see the Mongols actually flying planes. It was similar to Dr. Johnson's astonishment at the bear—not that he danced well but that he could do it at all.

Dr. Ludwin's story is that the Mongolians are fairly effective fliers, under the careful tutelage of the Russians, but he believes that in this vast desert waste the airplane will not be so critically important as in crowded and more vulnerable regions.

A Japanese bomber might make a bull's eye on a desert hut, but that would be nothing to write home about. The alluring targets of great cities are not there. Munitions depots are hidden far from the battle lines.

Many Japanese bombs must waste their devastation on the desert air.

Political Parade -:- By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Interveners in the anti-third term camp were inclined, at first glance, to conclude that handsome Paul McNutt had done himself not a bit of good in accepting the headship of the new Federal Security agency.

Moreover, they were not backward in ascribing to the Indiana politician, avowed Presidential candidate in his own right, motives which, if they were correctly diagnosed, would reflect as little credit on McNutt himself in particular as upon American politics, as played, in general.

AT FIRST BLUSH, the opinion seemed pretty general that McNutt had seriously injured what chances he may have had of becoming the party's nominee.

That bears looking at more closely, but let us get on with the story.

McNutt throws his hat into the 1940 ring, gets an astute manager in everything, opens headquarters and begins his campaign, resigning from his gaudy $18,000 job as Philippine high commissioner.

He comes to Washington, and is immediately taken into camp by the New Deal.

"By accepting this job from Roosevelt I get into the fold, and if the President doesn't run for a third term, I may receive his blessing and cop the prize.

"If the President does run for another term, what more likely than that he will pick me for V. P.?

"Failing that, if Mr. Roosevelt is nominated and elected with another running mate, I shall almost certainly land in the Cabinet."

PAUL McNUTT

Safe in New Deal Fold

Such thoughts as these may not have run through the mind of McNutt.

But that's the way most of the politicians figure it.

ALTHOUGH the anti-third-termers are bitter at the former Indiana Governor for qualifying his candidacy by saying he would not run if Mr. Roosevelt craved a third term, and for accepting a job inside the New Deal, it does not follow necessarily that this feeling would, in the end, be strong enough to keep McNutt from being nominated.

Here's why:—If the President, at the psychological moment, should announce that he would not accept a third nomination, take himself right out of it, and that, on the contrary, he would heartily support young Paul McNutt, why, the convention would be in a stampede for the Indiana fair-haired boy.

Democrats would be so relieved at getting rid of the Roosevelt menace, and so happy over the prospect of having as their candidate somebody the President would support, that they would grab at Paul and clutch him to their bosom.

DORIS NOLAN SIGNS FILM CONTRACT

By Louella O. Parsons

Doris Nolan

HOLLYWOOD, July 15—Doris Nolan, who chucked her movie career in favor of the stage on which she was far more successful, has just signed a new contract with Universal. She starts there Monday in "One Hour To Live" and this time gets a better break, I am told, than in her first one, "Top of the Town," which didn't do U very much good or Doris, either. She made three for Charles Rogers and "Holiday" for Columbia before she decided her place was before the footlights.

However, that's all ancient history and Doris is a pretty girl and a good actress when she gets the chance, so maybe "One Hour To Live" is the turning point in her screen career. Meanwhile her boy friend, Gregory La Cava, is preparing "February Hill" which he will produce for RKO under the title "The Primrose Path," its stage [illegible].

LISTEN, WORLD!

Should Modern Women Hold Their Jobs?

By Elsie Robinson

SHOULD those women who do not need the wage—girls and wives with fathers and husbands able to support them—hold jobs?

There's one question that's good for a 10-round scrap anywhere, any time. But with all due respect to those who insist that they SHOULDN'T I still insist THEY SHOULD!

"But they don't need the money?" Possibly not. But they DO need—and the whole world needs—something infinitely more valuable than money. THEY NEED THE CIVILIZING EFFECTS OF A JOB!

I do not believe it is possible for the average girl—particularly the girl from "a comfortable home"—to become a regular human being or a reliable partner unless she has known the drive and discipline of industrial life.

"But her Grandmother didn't know such drive—yet she was certainly 'regular.'"

GRANTED. But Grandmother knew another kind of discipline, as strenuous as those of any office or factory. She knew the pressure of old-fashioned family life . . . The drudgery of old-fashioned marriage . . . The restraint of old-fashioned convention.

Marriage was no ping-pong game in 1890. Brides didn't consider themselves Carefree Kids after they left the office—nor were they so considered. From the instant they said "I DO!" every aspect of their lives altered. Forthwith they became MATRONS—and Nothing Else But . . . as specialized and segregated in their position as Oriental women. Where, today, Mrs. Newlywed scoots around in slacks and shorts—plays badminton until Junior takes his cue, Grandma, at 19, stepped into matronly black taffeta and white apron, rocked demurely on the veranda even though her turbulent heart screeched in protest. I know. I was one of those rocking brides!

Did I screech? Lady, bald eagles had nothing on me!

Yes, Grandma GREW UP with her bridal vows—and definitely. But Granddaughter DOESN'T. Industry has removed the drudgery from her home . . . Suffrage has given her the privilege of the open trail . . . Madame Grundy has folded. The bride of 1939 has all the time there is—and nothing to cramp her style.

As a consequence she can—and all too often does—remain a SPOILED BRAT to the end of her days, with no restraining curb save the feeble and completely futile yelps of her bewildered spouse.

It's human to be pesty. Old fashioned wash tubs and families kept Gramma's pestiness within bounds. But our Machine Age life holds no such restraints.

THERE is just one modern device which can serve as a substitute for old-fashioned domestic discipline and that is A JOB. Preferably a job with a Mean Boss and a lot of Envious Cats trying to cramp our Honey Girl's style.

Then—AND NOW! comes her chance to meet reality . . . To realize that life isn't just her personal Peach Melba . . . To perceive that both [illegible] and tears have no place in a real woman's equipment . . . and to learn to be a regular citizen, a reliable partner and a good sport.

So I'm for jobs for women. It's true—they may "take the bread out of some poor man's mouth" . . . BUT IF THEY PUT A REAL MATE BY HIS SIDE THE LOSS IS WELL WORTH IT!

Make Speech Colorful

An important date—but her two-cylinder vocabulary betrays her. His glance at his wrist watch says he's bored with her dull phrases. "Is that so," "You don't say."

Yet it's simple to spruce up your talk ahead of time, learn colorful expressions, gracious phrases ready for use. A smart girl—you, for instance—would do that!

How clever your repartee, how bright your descriptions then. "I've been busy as a ticking clock." "Me? I just gaped like an indolent lion." "He's so jaunty and cocky."

Know gracious phrases to start others talking, too. "Do tell me about it." "What do you think will happen?" "Is that your hobby?"

Or are you tongue-tied, ill at ease when praise is due? Say, "It was like you to do that." "How clever of you." "What a knack you have!" With these you create a warm, friendly feeling.

You win admiration, too, if you know how to end a disagreement, say, "Perhaps I don't understand. I'm sorry I don't follow you."

And on everyday social and business occasions, what a help it is to know the cordial, poised thing to say. "We'd love to have you join us" to the unexpected guest—"How could you guess I adored sweet peas" to the man who sent them. "That was such fun" to your dancing partner—"I'm sorry to have kept you waiting" to a business caller.

Easily you can charm when you have the right words, the right phrase "filed" in your mind ready for use. Learn a few each day from our 40-page booklet, 1500 USEFUL PHRASES.

Birthday Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE
Saturday, July 15

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY—You are capable but given to engage in useless activities. You could become a great artist, especially the kind whose work is done before the public. Don't be careless in disposition. It is important that you attend to your soul's needs. Material gain is for naught without spiritual development. You are naturally clever and quick to learn—concentrate on achievement. Shun anxiety. Properly balance work and play.

IF TOMORROW IS YOUR BIRTHDAY—Happy as a lark at times then again moody and glum as an owl! Of course you may have realized this drawback (as so many capable people of this Zodiacal sector do) and corrected it by now . . . We hope so! You are innately just, very fond of children and kind to animals, the possessor of a retentive memory, a bright mind and an unusual gift for mimicry. Be firm with yourself; don't argue.

Quick Party Lunch for Vacationists

By MARTHA LEE

During vacation time young people are always ready for a party. But parties needn't be a chore — just roll the rugs back, turn on the radio, and invite some youngsters in to dance.

Serve a simple lunch on the porch, with paper plates and napkins. Or ask the juvenile crowd in for an al fresco supper after a hot day spent picnicking or tramping or just loafing.

Remember that they dote on informality and that their tongues wag most merrily over simple fare. Lots of sandwiches, stuffed eggs, iced chocolate and lemonade, and a good dessert to satisfy their sweet tooth, combine to produce a feast with real youthful appeal.

STUFFED EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs
1 tbsp. vinegar
2 tbsp. mayonnaise
¼ tsp. salt

Cut eggs in half lengthwise, remove yolks, mash and blend with mayonnaise, vinegar and salt. Refill whites. Chill. Serve on crisp lettuce with additional mayonnaise, if desired. Serves six.

ICED CHOCOLATE

Use two tablespoons of chocolate syrup to each cup of milk; beat with rotary beater or shake until frothy and pour over cracked ice in tall glasses. Flavor with cinnamon, ginger, a drop of peppermint extract, or crushed mint leaves, and serve with whipped cream if desired.

CHOCOLATE SYRUP

4 squares chocolate
1 cup hot water
1 cup sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla

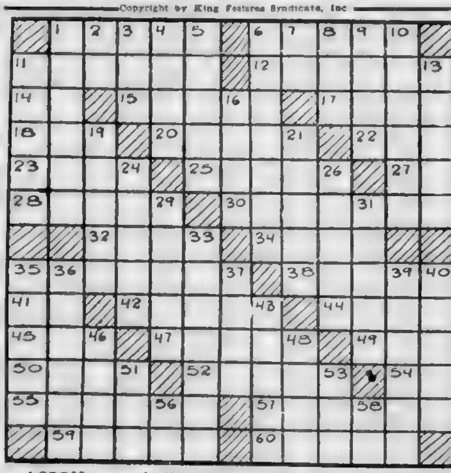

Melt chocolates over hot water, stir in hot water, sugar and salt, and cook about 5 minutes, stirring until smooth; cool and add vanilla. Pour into glass jar, cover tightly and store in refrigerator; it will keep well. For chocolate drinks, use 2 tablespoons for 1 cup milk; for ice cream or other dessert sauces, reheat and add 1 tablespoon butter. Makes approximately 1¼ cups of syrup.

Fashion News Flash

GET READY to welcome back the big beret! Autumn hat fashions will get a head start with berets in the lead and turbans close behind. And those last two words happen to be the big news as far as turbans are concerned, too, because the newest are fitted closely at the back of the head with firm draping reaching well down to the nape of the neck in some cases! This is apt to be in the form of a snood, curved to fit . . . therefore not exactly draping nor yet a real snood. But at any rate it's real anchorage for a hat. Indeed, this fall may see the passing of the elastic. Wide ribbons are being used, and in many cases the hat itself is cut much more deeply.

BLONDIE — Keep This Under Your Hat, Dagwood!

POOR Young PEOPLE

By MAY EDGINTON
Author of 'FAVORITE WIFE'

BURNE began: "Day! How dare you—" but stopped, having a strong suspicion that, here, his was the role of penitent. And he had rushed home, feeling such a conqueror, king hurrying to his queen!

He bit a nail—the old nervous gesture.

"I suppose," he said, "I'm not to fetch my things and stay here tonight?"

"No."

"Very well. You're . . . angry?"

"Yes."

"About Christobel?" he essayed. "I'm sorry I didn't tell you she was going, but I had to swear I wouldn't. And a bargain's a bargain. She's nothing to me except just someone more tiresome than another man would be."

"Did she look at it like that?"

"You're being so clever that I suppose you must know she didn't. We had a blazing row in Paris because—."

"[illegible]"

"Well, because you came first. I said I was going home. 'There's nobody in the world for me but Day. I [illegible] her.'"

"[illegible] to leave you?"

He [illegible] straighter.

"You believe me," he answered, quite simply.

She wasn't going to say, "I don't only believe. I know." What she did say was different.

"I wonder what you thought I'd do when you decided to dash off home because you had a row in Paris with Christobel."

"I thought—I mean I hoped—you'd be glad about everything. You'd be glad I've well, won out, so to speak."

"But, of course, I'm glad you've won out."

TOO DOMESTIC

"Without you it won't be winning out. You must see it, Day!"

"Why not, Burne? When you went away and before you wanted us to have separate careers. You despised women who didn't do things. You hate domestic women and wives."

"I do not!"

"When you went away, I was [illegible] down [illegible] all."

[illegible]

dreamlessly as, down in Sussex, her baby slept.

Burne had not apprised his mother of his return, so emotionless—as far as he was aware—had been their relationship to each other. They had never fussed nor sentimentalized nor cried nor laughed much either.

When he drew up, in a car borrowed from the firm, at Wellington Villa, next morning, he did not expect to find anything different about his boyhood home.

HER BOY RETURNS

Mrs. York was about her housework as usual.

But when she saw him, she dropped her duster, and ran to him, and in her first look and touch he felt guilt. In her face he read guilt. His wife had told him to go and find out for himself what was wrong between them.

He had come down here sternly to prove his mother guilty of breach of faith and he set about it in his usual manner, without delay.

"Burne—you're home!"

"I'm back, as you see. And if you've read your morning paper, mother, you'd have seen that my wife—your daughter in law—has had a great success in the new Ice Ballet. Of course, I was there."

"Come into the dining room." She tugged him into the little room with the immemorial work-basket overflowing. "Sit down. Tell me all about yourself and your success, my boy!"

"In a few words, then, I've pulled it off. But it's about my wife that I want to talk, and I don't want to lose time about it, mother. The baby was born here, I suppose? You looked after Day for me, mother, didn't you? It was you who asked for the arrangement. Now tell me all about it."

Mrs. York gave a fair and accurate description of events, up till the day when a strange ungrateful woman had appeared and carried off Burne's wife and son, after which she had no cognizance of them at all.

"But you sent on my letters and cables?"

Then there was a silence.

He began to know at once a little of how things had been.

"I got a letter from Day after the boy was born—five weeks after I say; and in it she mentioned asking you to cable me—giving you the money to cable me—"

He heard his mother murmur something about all this waste of money.

"Waste of money!" he cried, franctically. "You're crazy."

Mrs. York talked and talked; he didn't listen.

Then he had them in his hand, his unopened letters and his opened cables—Mrs. York had seen fit to read those.

"How dare you, mother!"

His mother exclaimed, expostulated, defended herself. She tried to drag in Punch Vanner and was silenced; to harangue against Laura Flowers and was silenced.

She tried to soften his heart by telling him how she had hoarded for him that weekly pound—"until now, Burne, I've got 48 pounds for you. Forty-eight pounds!"

"So you've kept all those tricks!" he cried out. "No wonder my wife wouldn't stay."

"You talk as if I was the wickedest woman—"

"Please get your outdoor things on, mother," he interrupted.

Mrs. York went out very meekly, leaving him walking about the little room, hating it as he had never troubled to hate it before. She came down in her hat and coat, pulled on cotton gloves.

A THREAT

"Where's this 48 pounds, mother?"

"In the bank."

"We'll drive there first, and get it out."

They drew out the 48 pounds, and he pocketed them.

"And now we've no time to lose," he said, looking at the clock on the dashboard.

"I must get back to the house."

For answer, Burne drove fast out of [illegible].

[illegible]

"If you don't do all I say today I will never speak to you again. You'll have no son."

She didn't speak again till they were in London, drawing up before a big department store in the Brompton Road, where the car could be parked. "Now mother."

He was a funny boy! An extravagant son. He who wasn't interested in women's clothes took her up to the expensive floor and turned her over to a bright saleswoman.

When she was returned to him, she appeared in dark blue from head to foot, from toque to shoes and handbag. Never in her life had she been so flustered and astonished.

"We've spent forty-five pounds of your wretched forty-eight," he said, still in a hard, quiet fury, "and we'll go to the massage and hairdressing now."

"Burne," his mother said, "if you think I'm going to alter my way of life—"

"I don't care any longer about your way of life, mother. You can go on with your martyrology or not, as you please. But this afternoon you're on a mission of apology, and you're going to do it well."

It was of no use questioning him; and the taut-strung little woman found herself circumvented, outwitted, mastered.

Later, in his car again, she was whisked off to a theatre, above whose portals she saw in big letters her daughter-in-law's name.

DAY FLOWERS

Burne looked up at it proudly, she noticed, yet very anxiously, too.

"What you think about the show doesn't in the least matter, mother," Burne said. "What does matter is that we have an appointment in her dressing room afterward."

Mrs. York by then could reply no more than: "Yes, dear."

And at last, the matinee over, her son escorted her swiftly along bleak corridors to a closed door. He put into her hands that packet of his withheld letters and telegrams.

"You'll give Day these yourself, mother, with your apologies, and I'll listen to what you say."

A star's dressing room!

All the flower trophies of the night before were still fresh and on a couch rested that girl whom she had brow-beaten, and practically starved, whom she had hated and cheated.

The star rose.

Her role was so easy, graceful, generous.

"But, darling, you've brought mother!"

Mrs. York laid those letters and cables down on the shamefully rich dressing table.

"Day, I—I've enjoyed your performance. I—I've brought Burne's letters and cables which I've been keeping for you, expecting you every day to ring up, or run down, and—and—"

Easy to be generous when one held one's world in one's hand!

"It'll be most exciting to read, read. Thank you."

Burne waited grimly.

Mrs. York said: "I'm very sorry for keeping the letters, Day."

And quite suddenly she sank into a chair, feeling old and fagged out and helpless.

"Burne's tired me out today," she quavered, explaining her breaking, but not without shame.

"You should be ashamed of yourself, Burne!"

"I am ashamed of myself, Day," Burne said.

PUNCH 'PHONES

While they talked—strange how easy it was to talk together now that everything was easy, charming—the telephone rang.

Burne picked up the receiver.

"I want Miss Flowers," said Punch Vanner's voice.

"This is Burne York speaking."

"Oh, good! Give Day my love and say I'm off to Paris, to Christobel. Tell Day I've wired and Chris has answered!"

"Good luck!" Burne cried fervently.

He stepped back to the couch where his wife lay curled up, and sat beside her.

"Darling, Punch is dashing off to Chris, who wants him in Paris."

"How lovely!" she said, secretly smiling.

Mrs. York was heard: "Is that Mr. Vanner really in love with Miss Ellies? And you two are in love! And I'm the only one left out!"

"Not a bit of it," Day said. Surely one could afford so much forgiveness; so many gifts. "Burne will be coming down for the week-end to see his son and we want you too."

"That's sweet of you," Mrs. York quavered. She wasn't used to using sentimental words; so still they came hard, but not as hard as they might have come, had she not been in new clothes, her hair waved and perfumed.

"Day is sweet, mother," Burne said.

Day thought; he's the kind of man who needs a woman to give him a lot of trouble. He needs to keep on asking and worrying. I'm going to make it very difficult indeed for my darling to keep up with me.

"What are you laughing at?" Burne asked, jealous [illegible] of her laughter.

"Us."

Pitching Can Make Us, Also Break Us---Cronin

By JOE CASHMAN

CLEVELAND, July 15—Two weeks ago, 13½ games and 10 defeats back of the Yanks. This morning 6 games and two defeats back of the Yanks.

[illegible] Joe Cronin's red stockinged second-placers the eighth wonder of the baseball world. [illegible] and 12th victory in a row on the road.

No longer are the Back Bay idolaters [illegible] scoffed at as aspirants [illegible] which has been monopolized by the Yankees since 1935. On the contrary, the majority of erstwhile scoffers have gone to the other extreme and are already nominating the Sox as the next champions.

The chief dissenter at this writing is none other than Joseph Edward Cronin, the guiding genius, inspiration and spark and most important cog of the miracle machine.

CRONIN CAUTIOUS

Cocky and confident, the Fenway foreman remains cautious. He refuses to go out on the limb over the happenings of the past two weeks.

The Cronin contention is that all he and his charges have proven by their spurt to date is that the Yanks can be beaten.

He isn't yet satisfied that the Bombers will be dethroned this year.

The acid test for the Sox, Boss Joe feels, starts this afternoon and will continue through a week from tomorrow.

"I think the averge fan is inclined to attach unwarranted significance to our feat of cutting the Yanks lead more than in half in two weeks," chirps "Captain Courageous."

"It was quite a stunt, I'll admit, but what may be overlooked is that we had everything in our favor.

"We had a schedule over the stretch which put a minimum of pressure on our pitching, our most vulnerable spot.

"We had a day off after facing the Yanks in Boston. We had another day off just before we tackled the Yanks in New York. Since then we've played only one game. Thus I had a surplus of slingers available for every game.

"Whereas I'm usually faced with a scarcity of them, and I could use as many as I wished in a game without fear of wrecking the staff for subsequent tilts.

"I don't say we wouldn't have done as well if we had played every time. I'm merely pointing out that the schedule was such that I have no way of knowing whether my pitching has actually become as good as it looked in the past two weeks.

"The remainder of this trip, however, will tell the story.

TWO GAMES IN THREE DAYS

"We have a single game here this afternoon, three games in two days in Detroit, starting tomorrow, and then four games in three days in both Chicago and St. Louis.

"Twelve games in nine consecutive afternoons will furnish the low down on the flinging.

"If the staff continues to shine over that stretch, I may be willing to discuss pennants a week from Sunday. At least I won't object if anybody wants to claim the flag for us.

"Mind you, I'm not looking for the corps to crack under this grind. After what "Woody" Rich showed me in the tenth inning of the night game here, I'd say now that the pitching is stronger than at any time previous this year. But I want to make sure before committing myself about a pennant. The pitching can make us. It also can break us."

Fred "Lefty" Ostermueller draws the assignment to face the Indians today.

The veteran southpaw is truly the enigma of the Sox staff.

He couldn't be given away in the spring of '38. He stuck on to have his best season ever, winning 13 and losing but four.

Early this season he looked so bad that he wouldn't be entrusted with a start and right up to June 15 he was on the auction block with no bidders.

Yet today his record reads five wins and only one defeat and he'll be seeking his fifth consecutive triumph when he faces the Tribe, which, incidentally, handed him his only setback.

Mose Grove and Elden Auker are being primed to twist the Tiger's tail in the doubleheader at Detroit tomorrow. And still playing hunches, Cronin is thinking seriously of starting Rich against the Bengals on Monday.

Only a few more of the pilot's hunches need work and he will have hunched his club into first place.

STENGEL KNOWS HOW TO HANDLE PITCHERS

Once again the Casey Stengel method has paid dividends!

The Bees pilot is a firm believer in yanking his pitchers hurriedly if he sees that all is not serene and peaceful.

Yesterday, Master Stengel sent his ace, Lou Fette, to the hill against the Cardinals with Lou fresh from his triumphs in the All Star game at New York last Tuesday.

Bridegroom Lou pitched to just four batters and that was enough. He walked Martin and then the trouble started. Brown tripled and tallied when Slaughter lofted to Garms. Mize followed with a double and Fette started toward the showers.

NOT HIS DAY

Stengel figured rightly that it wasn't Fette's day and why keep him on the hill when he could use Fette again Sunday against the league leading Cincinnati Reds at the Hive.

Thus, Case saved his best pitcher for the McKechniemen, and then had the pleasure of seeing his "hitless wonders" turn sluggers and come from behind to give the Cards a real lacing.

Smarting under that two-run handicap, the Bees feed on McGee and Paul Dean was rushed quickly in to his aid, but the Dean of old was not the Dean of yesterday, and before the initial frame was over, Shoun was called in, too. The wind-up was six huge runs, which was more than enough to clinch the game.

The Bees added four more before

Marad, Adams In Mass. Golf Finals

By BILL GRIMES

Two former club caddy titleholders, Ray Marad and Teddy Adams, are the finalists today in the 35th Massachusetts amateur championship at the Tedesco Country Club.

TEDDY ADAMS

Marad and Adams are unique in at least one respect. Marad [illegible] the George Wright Golf Club. He [illegible] ever to enter from a public course [illegible] of age, has reached the final [illegible] amateur classic be[illegible] to the final round of [illegible] junior championship.

Ray Marad started his golf career [illegible] Country Club. He was the runner in the 1935 Merrimack Valley caddy championship and [illegible] won the [illegible].

After his family moved from Lawrence, Marad gave up golf for a few years. But late in the first season of the Boston Retail Stores [illegible] Ball League, Marad was [illegible] by the Gilchrist Co. team. He reported at Wollaston and was paired with George [illegible].

Due to the fact that he was just breaking into the shipping department, Ray Marad played only one more match that season for Gil[illegible]. But the following year Ma[illegible] teamed up with H. W. Schaschke, won many points for his store team. And, since he has been eligible for the annual [illegible] Trade Board tourna[illegible], Marad has been a consistent prize winner and has advanced to the position of assistant superintendent of the shipping department.

MARAD UNDEFEATED

Marad qualified with a 76 – 79 — 155 and while on his way, played three 18 and one 20 hole matches. He opened up with a 1 up victory over Joe Lynch, Blue Hill, the 1933 amateur champion of the state and in the second round, he took the measure of Ken Corcoran, Oyster Harbors by a 1 up margin.

In the quarter finals, R. W. "Bunny" Wilson, South Shore carried Marad to the 20th hole. It was the most thrilling match that Ray has had in the championship. During the semi-finals, Marad has his troubles with the veteran Franklin T. Pfaelzer of The Country Club. By some sensational chipping and putting Pfaelzer played out the string and didn't yield until Marad had "foured" the 18th hole.

At the half-way mark of the qualifying round, Teddy Adams was tied with Leo Martin with a 70, three strokes under the nearest opponent. But, in the second round of the stroke competition, Teddy scrambled all over the layout and wound up with an even 80 for a 36-hole total of 150.

His [illegible] opponent was Joey Hoffman, Woburn, one of his closest pals. But friendship ceased on the first tee and Teddy rode home a 4 and 3 winner. Then he began to mow down the big shots, starting with Ted Bishop, who went down to a 3 and 1 defeat, and then Alan V. Ellis, who was a decided threat yesterday morning.

Ellis tested Teddy's game and his courage but found neither wanting, so he stepped out of the running on the wrong end of a 1 up match.

CARL FAILS

Carl Netteibladt, who was reinstated as an amateur a year ago, and holder of the 36 hole record at the Worcester Country Club, 69 67 136, was Teddy Adams' fourth victim.

Many of the experts figured Nettelbladt to succeed Freddie Wright as the amateur champion of the old Bay State. Carl is a great golfer and has had years of championship experience. He was fully entitled to the call over the 18-year-old Adams, who, incidentally, has three more years to play in state junior championships.

But Nettelbladt's past accomplishments and his reputation didn't disturb young Adams for a moment. Teddy went out yesterday and matched hole for hole with the long hitter from Worcester, and whenever the heavy pressure was on, as it was at the 16th, 18th, 19th and 20th holes, he came through without the slightest sign of a flinch.

Bees Boss Saves Fette for Reds

the game was over for good measure, while the Cards could wind up with only a total of four for the day.

"Tobaccer Jawn" Lanning, who answered Casey Stengel's SOS when Fette faltered, appeared very unimpressive for a few moments, but when he settled down, all was fine.

"JAWN" MASTER

Lanning took the hill with one gone and Mize on second base. He quickly complicated matters by walking Medwick and Padgett to load the sacks.

Moore followed with a grounder to Cuccinnello who rifled the pellet to Eddie Miller and Eddie continued the play to first for a twin killing and that ended Mr. Lanning's worry.

From then on Jim was complete master and toyed with the remnants of the Gas House gang.

He allowed only five hits in the eight and two-thirds innings he worked and fanned three.

Thus, a game that was given up for lost was captured and Casey Stengel still has Lou Fette for tomorrow.

Is there any wonder he's happy?

With yesterday's victory the Bees can get no less than an even split with the Cards, having won two decisions in three starts. Stengel is going to gamble on his hard luck southpaw, Milt Shoffner, this p. m., and Manager Ray Blades will counter with "Bo" Bowman, his prize rookie, which he brought up from Rochester this spring. Bowman at present has four victories in six starts, while Shoffner has one win against five losses.

NELSON, PICARD VIE FOR PRO GOLF HONORS

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP) — Byron Nelson and Henry Picard, the two best professionals of the year in the record book, backed up the book in convincing fashion as they went into the title round of the National P. G. A. golf championship.

They got there by contrasting routes, but each was equally convincing in his victory. Nelson, the U. S. open champion, continued to rip the Pomonok Country Club's par to shreds in overwhelming E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, the leaning tower of Oak Park, Ill., by nine and eight. Picard proving himself a fighter in a match with an equally stubborn scrapper, nosed out Dick Metz of Lake Forest, Ill., 1 up.

PLAY 36 HOLES

Today they will play 36 holes or less for the championship gained last year by Paul Runyan. The winner will take the lead in the Vardon trophy standing (the pros' batting average) in which they're now tied for first place, and if Picard comes out on top, he'll automatically win a place on the U. S. Ryder cup team. Nelson, due to his victory in the open, already is on it.

Lord Byron, who was afraid of Harrison's putter before the match started, apparently decided to beat his man to the punch. He started off by winning the first hole of the morning round with a birdie 3; was brought back on even terms when Harrison pitched stiff for a 3 on the par-4 second, but went out front to stay with birdies on the fourth and fifth.

SEVEN UNDER PAR

Nelson, who shot a practically unbelievable 65, seven under par, did it again yesterday on an outgoing 31 and home-coming 34, and was six up. They could have wrapped up the match right there, for Harrison definitely was on the ropes. But just to make sure there'd be no slips, Nelson carried on with a three-under par 32 when the afternoon round got started to be 9 up with 9 to go, and halved the 28th to close it out.

For 156 holes of golf, the Open champion is 28 under par. For his last two matches 55 holes he's 18 under standard figures.

IRISH TITLE TO ALICE

DUBLIN, July 15 (AP) Alice Marble of San Francisco, recent winner of the all England tennis championship at Wimbledon, today won the Irish title with a 6 2, 6 – 4 victory over Susan Noel of England.

Two Maxes Prepared For Joust

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP). They're dusting off Max Baer and Max Schmeling and dangling them out there in the heavyweight fish pond again. Just in case the ball [illegible] between [illegible] Nova and Tony Galento in the fall doesn't get the required [illegible].

It may be the threat of [illegible] Maxes as opposition for Two-Ton Tony [illegible] Nova's manager to fall in line on the stadium fight.

Carlin, the quietest and shyest of the fight managing fraternity, is willing to take Nova to Philadelphia to tangle with the Jersey barkeep but only if the Pennsylvania boxing fathers call in an outside [illegible] coming against the Quaker City [illegible] fiters but he'd like to get one of the nationally recognized "third [illegible]."

COUNT ON LOUIS

You see, Ray figures he has next spring's challenger for Joe Louis. Of course Galento may have some[illegible].

Ray is going to put his case before the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission next Thursday. In the [illegible] patient to get the whole thing straightened out.

"Who do they think they're kidding," was Carlin's attitude. "Nova is still the No. 1 man, the biggest attraction. So I won't be rushed.

"And if the Pennsylvania commission doesn't want to see my side of it, and Mike doesn't want to bring the fight into New York—then I'll have to go elsewhere with my business."

TALK OF BAER, TONY

So, it was being whispered around that maybe the Schmeling and Baer return to action may not be so far fetched. If Baer could be induced to come back to tangle with Tony it would be a fight [illegible] long time.

And Baer, who can add one and one as well as the next guy, probably wouldn't need much coaxing to take the tussel when he realizes what it would draw in Philadelphia. In that event, Schmeling could be brought across the big pond again for a shot at Nova.

Jockey Meade In Trouble

NEW YORK, July 15 (INS)—Don Meade is in another jam as a result of rough riding at Empire City. His riding license was renewed by the Jockey Club last April after he had been on the ground for almost three years.

In the sixth race, in full view of thousands, Meade, riding Count Maurice down the home stretch, bumped into Captain James, throwing him against Copper Tube and unseating Jockey R. Dotter, who was thrown from Captain James as the latter stumbled.

CHINKO BEST DOG BET AT TAUNTON

Armstrong to Box For Duce's Son

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., July 15 (INS)—Victor Mussolini, son of Italy's premier, will promote a boxing bout between Henry Armstrong, welterweight champion, and Aldo Spoldi of Italy next October in Rome.

START OF WINABOUT CLASS AT WOLLASTON. THEY'LL RACE AGAIN TOMORROW

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

AFTER THE Cardinals check out of town tonight, the Bees will start winding up their best Sunday punch for the Reds whom they meet in a double-header in the opening test of strength.

Even though the Reds are flying high and fancy in first place with the Bees low in the second division you may be sure there will be real action at National League Park tomorrow afternoon.

Apart from the natural rivalry between the members of the two clubs, there is the desire by Bill McKechnie and Casey Stengel to prove their class as managers.

McKechnie used to manage the Bees, and left the local club to assume the pilot's berth at Cincinnati. Casey Stengel stepped into a hot spot when he took over McKechnie's old job, but old Case doesn't do any backstepping merely because somebody happens to be tossing a few punches.

Last year Stengel and the Bees prevented the Reds from winning the National League pennant.

Stengel has had his troubles with his club this year, but believes he has got things straightened out to a point where the Bees can smack the Reds for a loss.

The Giants were rushing right up on the heels of the Reds when they got tangled up with the Bees. Bill Terry's outfit received a crushing setback from the Bees. As often happens, the Bees reversed themselves against the Phillies whom they should have swept right out of the ball park. After winning a Saturday double-header from the Phillies, the Bees dropped a Sunday double-header by one run margins.

The Reds will be here tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. They are anxious to win this series in an effort to increase their league lead.

Reds Have Well Balanced Club

WHEN IN Florida last Spring, I picked the Reds to win the National League pennant, and they refuse to let me down.

I also named the Yanks to win over the Red Sox, and I am rooting for them to keep blowing up. Along with every other baseball follower in New England I would like to see Joe Cronin's club win the American League pennant.

The Reds have well rounded out strength. In the matter of handling ball players, especially pitchers, Bill McKechnie rates with the best.

Bill will have a little rooting section of his own at the ball park tomorrow headed by Lawson Oakes. The McKechnie cheering section is anxious that the Reds win the pennant although it regrets a necessary part of this procedure may call for defeating the Bees.

Senator Hap Fenlon is coming up for the double-header with a party of friends from Westerly, R. I. Hap says he will remain perfectly neutral, rooting for the Bees in the first game and for the Reds in the second game.

Win or lose I assure you that old Case and the Bees will put on quite a show even though in doing so they may burst a few Cincinnati bubbles.

Indian vs. White Man

I believe it is the individual's ability combined with the proper training that makes one a better runner rather than whether one is an Indian or white man. Chief Stanton and Russell George, Indian runners, did not look so well in B. A. A. Marathons.

Tarzan Brown attributed his failure to win the North Medford road race to the fact he wasn't in condition, proving that training is important to a great star like the Narragansett distant runner.

Beauty Show

I know that beauty shows don't come under a sports page heading, but I would like you to mention the fact we are going to have another beauty show at the Marshfield Fair, which will be held from August 21 through August 26.

There will also be pari-mutuel betting on running horse races, in case one is more interested in the thoroughbreds than in South Shore beauties.

ERNEST H. SPARRELL,
President Marshfield Fair.

The suggestion of a "Lou Gehrig Day," which the press and radio have received with warm approval, apparently will develop into a reality. It is not an act of charity. On the contrary, it is a step forward, and when accepted by the major leagues will be a monument to baseball and would reflect its shadow over every home where there is a child. A gesture of this kind on the part of organized baseball to do something for the children of the nation would be outstanding.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., with its branches throughout the country, could administer this fund most advantageously.

There are doubtless many isolated cases in your local community where children have been deprived from other sports activities on account of the dreaded disease.

I have written Judge Landis on the subject and called his attention to Leslie Powers of the Phillies, as well as Lou Gehrig, both of whom are outstanding cases.

D. WALKER WEAR,
Senior Member,
New York Athletic Commission.

HASSETT JUMPS 24 POINTS

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—This week's accolade for the most improved batting in the major leagues goes to Buddy Hassett of the Boston Bees in the National and Bob Johnson of the Philadelphia Athletics in the American.

During the short week caused by the All-Star game, Hassett managed to swell his batting percentage 24 points to .343 and move from ninth to third among the National League batters. In the same time Johnson lifted his mark 14 points to climb to third ranking in the junior circuit.

Johnson was the only newcomer to the American League's hitting set, taking the place of the Yankees' Bill Dickey. Similarly there were only two changes in the National as Jim Brown and Joe Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals dropped out and Merrill May of the Phillies and Harry Danning of the New York Giants took their places.

The lead in the two leagues remained with Morris Arnovich of the Phillies in the National and Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees in the American. Arnovich lifted his percentage four points to .380 while DiMaggio, batting at a pace incomparable in recent years, raised his sensational .420 to a stratospheric .432, getting 12 hits in 24 times at bat.

The ten leading hitters in each league:

RED RUFFING PULLS YANKS OUT OF DREAM

DETROIT, July 15 (INS)—Red Ruffing registered his 12th victory of the year, ending the six-game New York Yankee losing streak at the expense of the Tigers who were beaten, 6 to 3.

The victory boosted the Yanks' lead over the idle second-place Boston Red Sox to six games. It was Ruffing who lost to the Red Sox a week ago to start the losing streak.

A single, a pair of passes and an error gave the Yankees two runs in the fourth inning. A pair of singles and a double by Babe Dahlgren were good for two more in the sixth. Two singles, a pass and a stolen base by Joe DiMaggio brought the Yankees their last two runs in the seventh inning.

The Tigers came back in the eighth to make three runs on three singles and Hank Grenberg's two-bagger.

Hayes, Chapman Spark Athletics

CHICAGO, July 15 (INS)—With Frankie Hayes and Sam Chapman pacing the attack, the Philadelphia Athletics whipped the White Sox, 7 to 3, for the second straight time in their series.

In the fifth inning when the Athletics rallied for four tallies and chased Jack Knott, Hayes clouted a homer with a man on base. Chapman landed on a pitch by Johnny Marcum in the ninth for a four-tagger with two mates on the paths.

Giants Cut Lead Of Reds to 5½ Games

NEW YORK, July 15 (INS)—The New York Giants whittled the Cincinnati Reds' National League lead to 5½ games by whipping them, 4 to 1, with a pair of homers.

Billy Jurges and Frank Demaree rapped home runs, each with a mate on the base paths, off Paul Derringer in the sixth inning. Derringer was reached for all the Giants' seven hits besides their four tallies. He was followed to the mound by Davis and Johnson.

Dodgers Fight Back To First Division

NEW YORK, July 15 (INS)—The Brooklyn Dodgers moved back into the first division of the National League, taking over fourth place as they defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 14 to 4, while the St. Louis Cardinals were being beaten and dropped to fifth by the Bees.

The Pirates' four pitchers—Bowman, Sewell, Bauers and Clemensen—were tagged by Brooklyn for 17 bingles, including a home run off the bat of Cookie Lavagetto. Klein of Pittsburgh smacked Luke Hamlin for a homer.

Senators Blow Game Open in Ninth

ST. LOUIS, July 15 (INS)—A six-run outburst in the ninth inning gave the Washington Senators an 11 to 9 success over the Browns.

Charley Gelbert walked for the Senators in the last frame, Sam West singled and George Case shot a single to count Gelbert. Then Buddy Lewis was passed and Johnny Welja's single brought home West and Case. Taft Wright followed with a home run to settle the Brownies' fate.

Roman Flag Tops Says Wilson

By DAVE WILSON
(Selections for fast track)

BEST BET—GRAND DUKE, 8TH RACE

A. B. Hangar's Roman Flag, which sped five furlong in new track record time to win eased up in his final essay at Empire City, is selected to measure classy competition in the $10,000 added Mayflower Stakes, five and one-half furlongs test exclusively for juveniles this afternoon at Suffolk Downs.

Trainer Maxie Hirsch brought the bay son of Cohort on the track between races Thursday afternoon and he made the slow racing strip look fast as he easily raced four furlongs in :47 1-5, easier than breaking sticks.

String along with A. J. (Whitey) Abel's Grand Duke in the eighth race. This one-time classy performer shapes up not only as the winner but as the day's safest wagering hazard.

FIRST RACE
Heraldic, Masked Gal, Little Mike

HERALDIC, freshened and thoroughly re-conditioned since the early part of the meeting, is coming up like a raging lion, judging by glowing advance notices from Rockingham Park. MASKED GAL again shapes up better than LITTLE MIKE, who ran for well-known Mr. Sweeney in his most recent race.

SECOND RACE
Powers Gouraud, Building Trades, Miss Pecan

POWERS GOURAUD, stablemate to Saidona which upset Bob C. and the talent yesterday and reputed to be a much better mudder, gets a standout figure over the platers down to contest honors in the second race. BUILDING TRADES is strictly an "off" track horse and looks all over the main danger. MISS PECAN ran a whale of a race to turn back Bob C. in her most recent race.

THIRD RACE
Patsey Begone, Terpsichore, Teddy Padic

PATSEY BEGONE is the only good mudder of this field with a good recent record. Patsey outstripped a clever field in 1:13 3-5 over a "good" racing strip in her final race at Delaware Park. TERPSICHORE was overmatched in a recent route race, but looks next best in this affair. TEDDY PADIC finished dead last in his initial start of the meeting, showing nothing at any stage of the journey.

FOURTH RACE
One O One, Abbaside, Onisac

ONE O ONE, if reserved for this race figures to gallop. Five-eighths in 1:02 over Thursday's heavy track served as a final. ABBASSIDE won her most recent start in clever fashion. She looks next best, although ONISAC may be pounds better than she showed in her most recent start, a very dull performance.

FIFTH RACE
Rehearsal, Stage Beauty, Rissa

Although a winner over a distance of ground in her only start of the meeting, REHEARSAL is pretty fair sprinter in her own right. Believe she may take the measure of highly-fancied STAGE BEAUTY, which will rule a short price in the wagering. Stage Beauty "dopes" all over a winner on sloppy or fast tracks, but shows poor form on slow or heavy footing. RISSA is cheap, but she can run over any sort of a track.

SIXTH RACE
Roman Flag, Flight Command, Abrasion

ROMAN FLAG will have a stiff competitor to drub in FLIGHT COMMAND, heralded by many New York turf writers as the most promising juvenile uncovered to date. ABRASION was beaten by a wake-up horse Cardell in his most recent race, and may prove real tough himself.

SEVENTH RACE
Swahili, Trina, Cash O'Boy

SWAHILI gets a standout figure over this field, and must be accorded preference. TRINA is moving up the class ladder, but she is game and honest which is more than can be said for the top selection. CASH O'BOY, on recent races, is entitled to a fighting chance.

EIGHTH RACE
Grand Duke, Brandon Prince, Some Boy

GRAND DUKE hails from a stable that takes any price. He was a fast closing second to Baby Sweep over the mile and 70 yards route the other day, and the additional yardage of this number should prove right to his measure. BRANDON PRINCE, an old fellow with bad legs, was not equal to the hard track that prevailed in his most recent start. SOME BOY has a very poor mud record, but fast track figures entitle him to a chance.

Dempsey Reveals Untold Story of Arthur Brisbane

By JACK DEMPSEY
(As Told to W. R. Seabrook)

I enjoyed my visit to England as champion of the world. England is a country that is rich in boxing tradition. It has been particularly interested in heavyweight matches.

While in England, I met Lord Northcliffe, the famous English publisher. Lord Northcliffe told me a story about the late Arthur Brisbane, famous editorial writer, that interested me a great deal.

It seems that Mr. Brisbane, who went to school at Oxford or Cambridge or somewhere like that in England after he had gone through an American university, was an A-1 athlete as well as a highbrow—and, yes, sir, one of the best middle-heavyweight boxers in the swell school. At least that's what Lord Northcliffe told me.

He said, Mr. Brisbane was proud of his physical strength and that he was, for a fact, one of the strongest and best built men in England at the time, tall, straight as an arrow and muscles like iron, and, as I said, plenty proud of it.

When Mr. Brisbane was still only 22 of 23, Lord Northcliffe told me, he was special correspondent in London for a big New York newspaper, and it was then that this thing I'm going to tell about happened.

In the West End outskirts of London there was the big English heavyweight pug, Mitchell, a regular tough guy, who had just knocked out an American fighter. A little American newspaper reporter who was a friend of Brisbane went to see Mitchell for an interview. Mitchell insulted him and said all Americans were no good and rotten and a lot of other nasty things about America and Americans.

When Mr. Brisbane heard about it he decided to pay a social call on Mitchell. He dressed himself up in spats and a braided frock coat and a high silk hat—or maybe that was the way he always dressed—and took his little friend along and went out to the gas-house district where Mitchell lived.

He found him in a room upstairs over a saloon, playing cards and drinking gin with about six other tough guys, including Mitchell's father, who was also a prize fighter.

Mr. Brisbane said:

"Look here, Mr. Mitchell, you have said insulting things about America and my friend and I think you should apologize."

Mitchell, who was as big as Mr. Brisbane and maybe 30 pounds heavier, and a famous professional fighter at that, roared laughing and spit on the floor.

A REPORTER'S RIGHT

Mr. Brisbane said:

"Well, then, I'm sorry, but I guess I'll have to do it."

Mitchell jumped out of his chair and started across the room, and the next thing he knew he was flat on his back, from a clean right hook to the jaw. The others jumped up but did nothing, wailing. I guess to see Mr. Brisbane murdered, for he had waited until Mitchell got on his feet again, and Mitchell went at him like a bull.

Mr. Brisbane ducked inside his swing and knocked him down again and then they all jumped on Mr. Brisbane and his little friend and threw them out in the street.

But he didn't mind that. He was proud and pleased with what he had done, and everybody congratulated him when it got about London.

CREDIT TO KEARNS

I don't give myself all the credit for my success. I is no press agent dope that Jack Kearns helped make me champion and I hope he's satisfied, as the song goes. And there's also a question of luck and of having your chance.

I guess there's more than one man, more than a dozen men, maybe hundreds of them, scattered through the world that could knock a champion cold if he had the chance.

Some of them, maybe, are men who have never been inside a ring and never put on a pair of boxing gloves.

By the way, I tried meeting all comers, early in my adventures with Jack Kearns. We traveled around the country with a burlesque show, taking on all comers, regardless of size and weight, offering a thousand dollars to any man who could knock me out. We advertised it in every town, and always there was some big bruiser ready to take a chance for that much real money—and there was no fake about it. If they won, they collected. But nobody ever did. That may have been part luck, but is was mostly training and knowing the game. I went up against some pretty tough babies, a lot of them bigger than I was, and a few of them a lot stronger.

MANY COULD BEAT ME

That's where the game comes in. You're not trying to kill the other fellow. You've got to play it fair and square by the rules. Cut out the Queensberry rules, and I guess there's many a man could lick a champion in a barroom fight.

Trosky's Name O. K.'ed by Court

CLEVELAND, July 15 (AP)—Harold Arthur Trojovsky, born 26 years ago in Norway, Ia., received probate court permission to be known legally as Harold Trosky because of "business and other reasons." The Cleveland Indians' first baseman has used his new legal name professionally since he broke into baseball.

LIGAROTI TO SHOW AT ROCKINGHAM

SALEM, N. H., July 15—"Bing" Crosby's Ligaroti, champion handicap horse of South America, will arrive at Rockingham Park today to take part in the 18-day summer meeting which will open here on Monday, July 24.

One of the favorites to win the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap, the star of the Argentine ran a disappointing race over the muddy track, and Roy O'Neill, foreman of the Binglin Stable, announced yesterday, when he visited Rockingham to inspect the stall accommodations, that Ligaroti will race at least three, and possibly four times during the 18-day meeting here.

"Jim Howard, trainer and co-owner of the horse with Crosby," said O'Neill, "has decided that Ligaroti needs racing, and he will get one or two allowance races under his belt before he appears in the Granite State Handicap or the Rockingham Park Handicap. He worked brilliantly for the Massachusetts, but did not run to his works, and Mr. Howard has decided that a schedule of a race a week will whip him into condition to meet the outstanding handicap horses in the East."

Don Mike, another handicap horse owned by Crosby and Howard, will arrive here late next week, and the two thoroughbreds will be run as an entry in both the Granite State and Rockingham Park Handicaps. Don Mike suffered a slight injury before the Massachusetts, necessitating his withdrawal on the eve of the race, but it is expected that he will be fit and ready to run at the approaching Rockingham meeting.
